

FOX NEWS HOST: Now our next guest is running for Governor of Superior, welcome to the show Roberto Telles.

Telles: Hello all, it's an honor to be here.

HOST: Let's start off, we'll, you've been in the news lately for- umm- a late switch in campaigning

Telles: I suppose-

HOST: Yeah, well, you're not favored here, uh let's say that. What is your message to get people to vote for you with Election Day coming up.

Telles: Uh- let's look at the situation here you have a principled, trusted man and then you have a crazy socialist. The choice here is really whether you want a stable state or not -I mean- I.

HOST: and how will you lead?

Telles: with courage and honesty- and personally I have a very diplomatic way of doing things and I'm willing to compromise unless it -um -um would -uh -like go against my core beliefs in life.

HOST: and what are your beliefs, if I may ask?

Telles: my beliefs are that the people are the supreme and not the government, the powers of government are given by the consent of the people and rights of the people are absolute no matter.

HOST: Now, many of your beliefs have been labeled by extreme themselves, so-

Telles: There is no extremism in defense of liberty, there is no such thing as moderate liberty. You must be for or against-

HOST: I understand, but you seem ummm- uh, very fiscally conservative more so than the establishment of the party. Is this-

Telles: I support the rights of the taxpayer, the consumer and the businessman, more than the rights of the executive.

HOST: uh- but that's-

Telles: Look at the Soviet Union, look at Venezuela, look at everywhere that has tried Nazbol's ideas, that's not 'progressive' , that's regressive.

HOST: I agree, now, let's talk about something else. Originally, former governor Nimitz was running for governor as a Republican nominee but he left the party. Do you know what happened that led to this-

Telles: I- I-

HOST: Wait so, uh. Why did he leave the party and what role did you play in this because-

Telles: I was not involved, but he left the party for personal reasons, and he disagreed with some key positions. That's the end of the story and I will not be talking about this anymore.

HOST: I'm disappointed but okay, I guess. We don't have much time left here, but what policies- positions are you running on.

Telles: Individual Rights. Tax breaks for business owners, helping farmers, establishing Native American- Native American rights and just improving the quality of life in Superior.

HOST: and how will you do that?

Telles: first of all by getting the government out of everyone's business, repealing restrictive regulations. The socialists what to talk about the big guy and the little guy- the big guy is the government and he is we what out of the business of the little guy and the medium-sized guy

HOST: Okay, uh- thanks for the time and hopefully we will catch you later, I know you're very busy, thanks for your time.

TELLES: Thanks for having me, I'll be back tonight at 8!

HOST: Right. See you.

TELLES: ¡Hasta Luego!
