Pre-event work · Task 2

Three questions for your team.

Talk through these together before you travel. Bring notes, not polish.

These are not questions to answer alone or in writing first. They're questions to talk through as a team. The goal is shared understanding of the problem you're bringing to Seoul — and surfaced disagreement about it. If everyone on the team agrees right away, the conversation hasn't gone deep enough yet.

Each question has a short example showing what a strong answer looks like — not to tell you the answer, but to show the texture. Write your team's response in the space below each question. Submit two weeks before Seoul.

Question 1 of 3

Where could AI matter most in your country's education?

Be specific. A learner population, a teacher problem, a policy gap, a system bottleneck. Avoid "everywhere."

An example of what a strong answer sounds like:

How struggling students get spotted — before they fall too far behind.

Your team's answer:

Question 2 of 3

Why has change in education been hard in your country?

The honest answer — political, financial, capacity, cultural. What's stalled reform before?

An example:

The last three Education Ministers each launched a flagship reform, and each one stalled when implementation hit district-level politics.

Your team's answer:

Question 3 of 3

Where would you begin?

A small step you could take this month.

An example:

A first conversation
