

Hey there Ahsan,

I recently came across your company, xyz, through an Instagram reel in which you were advertising the Taweel Max. I must say, I got curious and decided to explore your Instagram and website to learn more about the product you sell.

While going through your content, I noticed a couple of areas where you could potentially improve. Firstly, I believe you could enhance the way you write about your product to make it more persuasive and convincing. By presenting the product in a compelling manner, you can create a stronger desire for potential customers to purchase it.

Secondly, I feel that your advertising strategies could use some refinement. It is essential to find ways to reach out to more potential customers and share the benefits of your product with them effectively. Many top companies use a technique called pulsepoint, which taps into emotions and convinces individuals that their lives would significantly improve with the product. Implementing such strategies can boost your sales and customer base.

To assist you in this endeavor, I have created a free gift project for you. It can be used as an advertisement and should be included in the description of the product. I believe this will help you attract more customers and generate more sales. You can find the project here:

Please let me know if you think this project aligns with your invoice and if you find it helpful in achieving better results.

Best regards,
Mairaj
