Preliminary Teaching Fieldwork Evaluations

All preliminary teaching credential programs utilize POP (pre-conference, observation, and post-conference) cycles for university supervision. At the end of a POP cycle, supervisors meet online with their candidates to review an additional video clip that demonstrates development of an identified skill that was discussed during the POP cycle. Pre, Post, and evaluation conferences may be held in person or via Zoom. Observations occur in-person at school sites, with a follow up video. These rotations occur twice per semester. In addition, candidates have informal observations and receive feedback on a regular basis from their guide teacher. Site coordinators and principals visit at least once a semester for informal visits.
