Documentary Analysis

Human rights are inherent to us all, regardless of nationality, sex, national or ethnic origin, color, religion, language, or any other status.

Since we were born into the world, as human beings, we were also born with our rights. It ensures that we become a productive part of society and stay safe anywhere in the world. One of our most important rights is to live quietly and peacefully. Every government in the world tries to maintain order and peace in every corner of the world. Everyone should be kept out of harm's way and away from criminality. It is also a person's right to get an education and find a good job. We need to learn in the classroom to be prepared for the future workforce. Anyone is also free, as long as they attend school, to find their future job or occupation. It is also part of a person's right to choose the future leader of the country. No one, as long as they are of legal age, should be denied the right to vote or run for any government position.

And one of the important human rights is to be able to defend oneself against any accusation and tobe given a fair trial. No one should be punished without a proper hearing of the case. The law protects this right of anyone so it must be followed.

By watching this video, students from Grade 9 gained a wider understanding about the importance of human rights. They became more aware of the violations of each other's rights. Because of this, the students were enlightened that other people's rights should not be ignored.
