

Ancient Tool Project

By Kaila Amarista

I made my tool out of mud and a rock. It was pretty simple, all I did was find a rock that was thin and then find some mud. I got a stick and used it as a paint brush for the mud then made some art on the rock and that's all.

My tool was used to tell a story about someone's life or to share with others their lives. I think people wanted to share their lives with other people because they enjoy telling stories and also hearing from other people.

My tool was found in a cave. The cave was found while I was hiking in the mountains. The cave was pretty big and really dark so I had to use a flashlight to find anything. In the cave it was not really hot or cold it was kind of in between. There were a bunch of other cave paintings all over the walls. It probably survived because caves are pretty strong. It tells us their story, it's tells us about their lives. My tool was used 40,000 years ago.
