tw for some things in here. i also am very bad at staying on track when writing so this is kinda all over the place.

hello everyone. it may seem odd seeing this account tweet again or it may not be. i have had a very happy but odd life since i stopped using this account and am also going into college soon. i hope you all have had similar emotions or feelings since then but what do i know. anyways, i came back after who knows how long to say a few things. i dont want this to come off as a cry for help or to sound like a victim in any way because this whole document will be me rambling about things because i never really had the chance to until this.

from time to time, i look over everything that happens in the beat saber community because i like keeping up with things and that is unfortunately the person i am. something i like to do is think, whether it harm me or harm other people, i do it. this, in other words, is somewhat predatory. i try to keep track of the drama of people getting cancelled or called out for some odd behavior. it disgusts me and i cant break the habit. looking back at my old tweets on this account, which have now been mostly deleted, i realize that i was a very awkward person. i changed my attitude or personality to make myself likeable to other people and it has carried on and corrupted my personal life which has led to me being the “butt of a joke” in a way for most of my personal friendships. the real reason i write this is because of a few things. one of them is that while i was looking at this drama, i looked up myself. nothing different was on my account as i had expected but i saw people talk about me like i was some ancient myth. it was quite nice to see me still being talked about and even in context of my beat saber skill. however, i dont want to be a myth, i want to be forgotten.

when i joined the beat saber community back in around 2020, if i were asked what my goal in life was, i would say “i want the smallest ego.” to me now, this is very odd. i dont know how or when i made this but it had stuck with me for most of my pubescent years (since around 13). around that time as well, i was in my first intimate relationship with someone who i briefly introduced to my closer beat saber friend group. at the time i thought nothing of it but when it hit me, it hit me. when i was dating this person, i was at an all time low. i had horrible grades, my parents practically had to carry me on their back to get me to do something, and was deep into drugs. so when i looked back at our relationship, it was almost clear that i was being used for mental and physical benefits. i wish i had noticed sooner so i could understand where my mind was really at in terms off all of this. we cut off eventually and it had taken not as much of a toll as i thought it wouldve. i have come to realize now that it's because of the friends i had made from this community.

near the end of 2022, i had been deep in the beat saber community. i was hanging out with people much much more popular than me and interacted with many other people. this was what my inevitable goal was in the beat saber community, to be known. however, the longer and longer i felt this feeling the more i came to realize that i just wasnt cutting it for those people anymore and they eventually started fading away. this is where i started my routine of changing myself to fit in. i dont even remember what i did and i dont want to either but it only cut me out even faster. on new years day of 2023, i had thought that i was completely unlikable and wouldnt fit in anymore. so in my great mind, i removed and unfollowed and blocked every single person that i could associate with beat saber out of my life. 2 days later, thinking that this would be the rest of my life, i had attempted suicide. i was hospitalized for around 3 months and was put into therapeutic care for up until now. i look now and notice how much that goal of having such a tiny ego would change me. i never focused on making it smaller and smaller, i only made myself focus on people more and more to the point of insanity. to me, this topic has never been sensitive to me and i think thats due to me thinking that life just goes on and you can never know what'll happen next.

now, i want to talk about everything that has happened since then (atleast regarding you guys). i made this account thinking i could repent somehow to help my case. i think that went the complete opposite way. i made myself possibly the most controversial beat saber twitter user on the platform, and that might be saying something. i sparked so many discussions that i really regret but can only assume it helped build character. i have never been honest and shared what i thought was right on here nor have i said anything remotely peaceful funnily enough. i am not the person i was then anymore. although some aspects of that life have seeped their way in, i have been told to embrace them. theres probably a quote for that somewhere but that would make me cringe writing it out.

this whole paragraph is a side track but is still a point i want to make.
to everyone i have ever talked to or atleast had a horrible first impression with. i am sorry. i wish to name names but for the sake of privacy and keeping this short, i will be subtle. i am sorry. i am sorry to scoresaber staff members for always choosing a side and never hearing anything out. i am sorry to the people i have worked with in cube community and BSTS for being very ignorant and inconsiderate. i am sorry to the CS community staff for constantly nagging them about people who i believed should be shunned for the actions they committed that had come to life. i am sorry to the friends i made prior to this account i blocked out and tried reconciling with. i am sorry to the people i was ignorant enough with to force false rumors on me with killed my efforts of joining back peacefully. i am sorry to the people i speak with today for being so blunt and rude at times. i am sorry to the people that have had to fix petty drama for me for the sake of convenience. i am sorry to the people i have told to shut others out if they dont like you. i am sorry to the people i have doctored messages from to fit a narrative. i am sorry to the people i have broken promises with. i am sorry to the people i have lied to. i am sorry to the people i have annoyed in my life. i am sorry to the people who thought i was a bad person. i am sorry to the people i have tried to force friendships on. if you think that you are one of these people, then you are.

i dont want you to think that this is my introduction back, like i said, this isnt a cry for help or me victimizing myself or even trying to clear my name. i finally have the chance in my life to change and have a fresh start so i thought this is where i would place a brick. if there is anything i can say about this community, it would be that there should be more hope. not only in yourselves but in the people around you as well. seeing the people i had grown to know be in the same position i was in 3 years ago is humbling and gives me a sense of relaxation oddly. the goal of this doc is to be seen, many of the people i am referencing dont use twitter but if you think that you are one of those people or know one of them, i would appreciate you to let them know. if you thought nothing of this and think that i was a chill person, i thank you for believing in me. i wish nothing more but the best of you all. i will not be interacting any further on this account after and will be promptly wiping most of my other social media of beat saber esque things after this is posted but i am pretty easy to find if you would like to talk.