Atlanta, Dixie —The two Dixon figures planned and attended a rally in the second most populous region of the state. Below is a transcript of what each said and pictures from the rally.

"Dixons, unlike Seldom, I'm not here for political rhetoric. I'm not here for a soundbite. I'm here for the betterment of Dixie and her people. Under previous Democratic Governors, Dixie has flourished. Unemployment has been low, Dixians have had food on their table and money in their bank.

Cry addressed the protests aimed at union rights. Cry kept a close eye on the Adith Administration, whose actions in Mexico caused the cartels to stage an attempt on American soil.

Cry's only flaw is silence. He moves silently, opting to let his actions do the talking. It is for this reason I'm here today. To be a LOUD and vocal supporter of the Governor. The Republican misinformation machine is roaring in Dixie. They would have you believe Cry is lazy and unfit to lead this state further. I laugh. Look at the Dixie Assembly. Not a single Republican has been sworn into office. Even if you voted for Seldom, nothing would get done! We can't even get them to show up to work! And she thinks she can run the Governor's mansion?! Ludicrous (alt: lunacy). We need a true leader. Someone that has walked with Dixie through thick and thin.

I know many of you elected Tripp to be your Governor. You did that knowing full well that if anything were to happen to him, his Lieutenant Governor pick Crydefiance would take over in his stead. After the election night, Tripp began to fall ill. Several days later, he passed the reigns over to Cry, who has led our state with dignity and honor. He now seeks another term, another chance at improving Dixie.

Before I decided to endorse him, I asked him many questions, the first of these being "what do you expect to accomplish as governor?". He gave me three answers.

The first struck home for me. He wants to address and improve the mental health of this state's youth. As someone who suffered from mental health issues as a child, seeing a Governor from Dixie stand for this meant a lot to me.

The second point is that he desires to increase and improve our infrastructure the right way, the green way.

Lastly, he aims to strengthen the working class and raise wages through concrete legislation!

Now tell me, who has a problem with any of that?! I certainly don't. Anyone who does have a problem with improving the lives of our kids, improving our roads and bridges, and getting the wage you deserve needs to stop listening to Whitey and his far right rhetoric!
Governor Cry is a visionary. Like me, he sees great things for our state. He cares for the people. He believes the state should offer only the best for its people.

That is why I am proud to endorse Governor Cry for re-election. Under him and Bailey, this state has a very bright future. I can't wait to see it.

Without further Ado, allow me to introduce your Governor, Crydefiance."

Scribba steps away from the podium and waves Gov. Cry over. The two share a brief handshake before Cry takes center stage.

"Representative Scribba, thank you. You are much too kind. You're right about at least one thing, however. I do see great things for this great state! My friends, our work is only just beginning, and we have a great ways to go yet before it is finished.

We have a mighty work to do for the children of Dixie, who suffer an unprecedented level of mental and physical health conditions. We can not, we must not stand by while anxiety and obesity cull the future of this state, our children. By investing heavily now in healthcare we will reap a hundredfold what we sow. Let me be very clear: No child's wellbeing should depend solely on their parents' income level. Even now we are working hard to make that a reality.

We're building new clinics and hospitals in areas that haven't had them previously. We're working to get the best doctors and nurses and healthcare workers who are paid generously for their vital service. We're going to make sure that healthcare is a universal right for all Dixons in perpetuity.

As we invest in the future, we must move towards carbon neutrality by embracing renewable energy. Dixie, with all of her diverse, natural beauty, is especially threatened by the effects of climate change. Rising sea levels, more frequent and destructive tornadoes, hurricanes, and wildfires; all of these will displace and destroy lives and livelihoods of too many Dixons.

For that reason, my administration has worked tirelessly to improve the green infrastructure of Dixie. More state agencies now use electric vehicles. We are continuing to build EV chargers all over the state. We are embracing and constructing solar, wind, and nuclear power plants. As we work together to fight the existential threat of climate change, I am confident that all Dixons, present and future, will reap the benefits.

Finally, we have a mighty work to do for the workers of Dixie. In order to secure the prosperity of Dixie, workers must be treated fairly, with good, living wages and safe, healthy working environments. We know that the best way to accomplish this is through unions, and it is for that reason that we are working hard to protect and strengthen unions and unionized workers in Dixie. Whether you are a warehouse worker in Dallas or a coal miner in Alabama, you are worthy of dignity and respect. We must not allow corporations and big business to trample the rights of the people, and that is why unions must be protected and strengthened.

Now there are some who would decry our efforts as Cesarean tyranny. If I may be so bold, they fear the people, and the right of the people to rule. To quote President Theodore Roosevelt: "In the days when all governmental power existed exclusively in the king or in the baronage and when the people had no shred of that power in their own hands, then it undoubtedly was true that the history of liberty was the history of the limitation of the governmental power of the outsiders who possessed that power. But today, the people have, actually or potentially, the entire governmental power. It is theirs to use and to exercise, if they choose to use and to exercise it. It offers the only adequate instrument with which they can work for the betterment, for the uplifting of the masses of our people."

Well, my friends, I propose that we pick up that great instrument of government and work together for the betterment and uplifting of the people of Dixie! God bless you, and God bless this Great State of Dixie."
