Timestamp	How important is getting into character and developing your character's personality and backstory?	How important is exploring richly described environments with intricate maps & lore?	How important is mitigating tuction and rushing headlong into danger?	How important is fighting villains and monsters?	How important is optimizing your characters' capabilities through leveling up and items?	How important is solving puzzles and mysteries or outwitting villains or scrutinizing NPC motivations or the described environment?	How important is contributing to an unfolding story by engaging in encounters that are tied to an overarching and expanding plot?	How important is comparing media (drawings, paintings, music), maps, backstory, and so on) to accompany your TTRPG experience?	How important is creating or collecting physical products (minis, maps, terrain, dice, and so on) to accompany your TTRPG experience?	How important is the silliness and frivolity (jokes, laughs, having a drink with friends, shouts of glee, and so on) of the social aspect of tabletop gameplay experience?	[Acting]	[Exploring]	[Instigating]	[Fighting]	[Optimizing]	[Problem Solving]	[Storytelling]	[Composing]	[Crafting]	[Goofing]	[Other (see below)]	What other kinds of activities do you enjoy when playing tabletop roleplaying games? (optional)	Are you interested in joining a forever-free, community-driven, "competitive" D&D League that provides free modules and prizes to winners?
