Welcome to Bainbridge High School, and thank you for attending tonight's Fall Band Concert! Your attendance is a great way to support these young musicians. We have been hard at work for about 7 weeks preparing for tonight, and we hope you enjoy the performances of each ensemble. These students have been building the skills needed for this concert for years. Music is a beautiful spiral curriculum that young people all over the world cycle through year after year. Each time we, as musicians, begin working on a new piece, it's a new chance to discover an artistic world new to us and our audiences. Thank you for sharing that experience with us tonight.

There are a number of people that need to be thanked for making tonight possible. Mr. Burton and Mr. Meehan teach the bands at Sakai and Woodward respectively, and they are both tremendous educators. The high school band benefits endlessly from their hard work. Thanks, guys!

Here at BHS, we are lucky to have the support of our administration (Ms. O'Neill, Ms. Lemmon, and Ms. Haizlip) and are thankful for the work of our custodial staff (Mr. Fricke is working the band room this year; he's the man. Thanks, buddy). Other big thanks go to Ms. Spray, Ms. Silver, Ms. Ferguson and Mr. Taylor for being awesome in the office as well. Faith Chapel and Peter Bang-Knutson in the district office are also very much appreciated for their continued awareness and support of our music programs. It takes a village, and ours is pretty great.

We'll talk more during the concert, but I'll leave it at that for now. Enjoy the show, and take care, revealed next through Grieg's infamous composition, "In the Hall of the Mountain King." Jay Dawson's exciting arrangement shows us that, in reality, no one is "completely" safe. Aase's Death portrays the realization that each of us is actually our very OWN worst enemy. This story has no villain, because the ultimate struggle occurs each and every day, from our own shortcomings. With this realization, comes the truth that we are capable of choosing our own paths, that each of us is capable of greatness, if we open our eyes and work at it. The Finale is our journey through that self-discovery. Enjoy.

Chris Thomas | Director of Bands | Bainbridge High School

With "Monster on the Mountain," Bainbridge High School is excited to bring a tale of the struggle within to the marching field. Pairing music from Edward Grieg's famous Peer Gynt Suite alongside selections from Disney's Beauty and the Beast, the audience is sure to recognize some great melodies in this unique setting. A familiar and beautiful prologue sets the stage, which quickly gives way to the happy churning of everyday life. The beast is
