

University of Alaska
Many Traditions One Alaska

Position Job Duties

530032_Term Assistant Professor of Aviation Maintenance Technology

75% Teaching: This position carries a full-time instructional workload during the academic year. The incumbent will be responsible for teaching a full course load (typically 24 to 27 credits) of undergraduate courses in a manner consistent with specific course content guides. Faculty are also expected to provide academic counseling to students, hold office hours appropriate for the course(s) being taught, and be proactive in developing and modifying curriculum for delivery in assigned teaching modalities.

25% Service: This position is required to provide services to the Department, the College, the University and/or the Profession. This service may include curriculum development, service on committees, or other service as approved by the Division assistant dean.