And... For this year only... introducing a one-man army, The Brave Man of the Dragon!

Jenja23, who will be doing all 5 games himself, going up against these three great teams!

Outline

The Breath of Fire Series Relay event is a race between three teams of five (Team Ryu, Nina, Deis)... and Jenja. The teams are made up of existing runners from last year, as well as many exciting new entrants. Some new WR holders, some people who are switching categories for their game (namely, the BoF II runners, where Glitchless runs have been popular over the last year)

As fans of the series and speedrunning as a whole, we hope you enjoy these runs. They are, honestly, rather long runs, as the Breath of Fire games are known for being epic and expansive, but the way the strategies have been built up to get through these games in the time we do make for exciting, dangerous and clever speedruns.

The exciting thing about this community is that we have representation from all over the world, spanning about 8 different timezones, which I feel is pretty cool. This is a global franchise, with fans all across the world dedicated to these games, and the scene is yet growing.

The stream goes live at 10:30am EST, with a little introduction from myself, a hello and welcome to the event. A brief history of Breath of Fire and introduction to the teams, and then we'll kick it off with Breath of Fire on the SNES.

Upon completing each game, and due to the nature of Jenja's challenge, we will let the credits play out to 'The End' and then tag out players. This allows Jenja to take his breaks without falling behind, where other players wouldn't have to worry.

At 'The End' the player will tag in their next teammate, who will start their own game.

At the end of Breath of Fire V: Dragon Quarter, I will say a few goodbyes, and, along with those who want to be there for the end, say goodbye and thanks.

The estimate for all games, if we're looking at cumulative PBs and adding in marathon safety for the purposes of not losing the race is around 35 hours. So it'll be a long event, and people should be able to pop in and catch their favourite game at some point over the weekend.

During this event, if people want to tweet out their memories of the series and share their thoughts on the runs, please use the hashtag #BoFRelay2 :D
