

Note: Some are resolved/resolving but most are still ongoing.

- 1) Flowery, a person banned in the game, main discord server, and staff discord server, is still effectively staff, creating all diagrams.

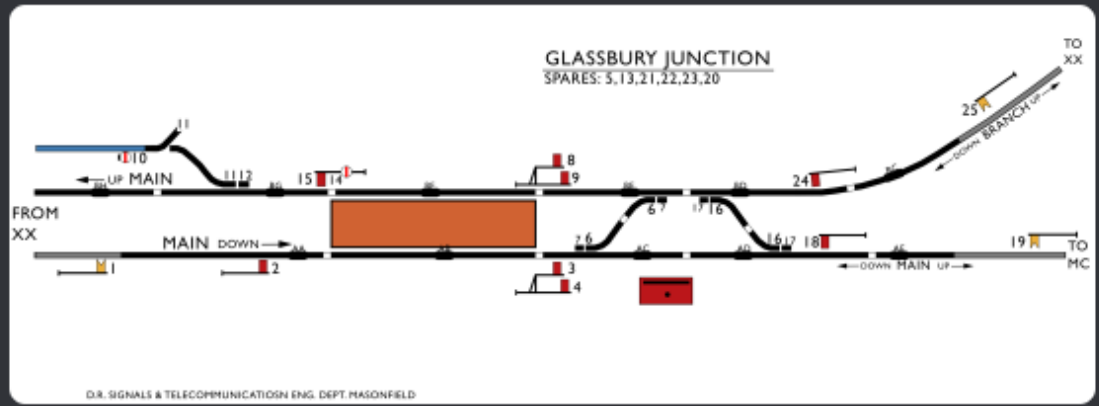

The reason this is such an issue is that there are 3 or 4 people, 2 testers and 1 developer primarily, who have expressed interest and knowledge in making the diagrams for dovedale. (for context, those being Sebi and DJ as the testers, and myself as the developer.) This also led to me being placed on doing work I know I'm not good at, as Meow (the development manager) refused to let anyone else but Flowery do signal diagrams, and refused to give me anything I was even somewhat good at.

i made an fm one today

- 2) Several members of staff, including management/hr are extremely condescending and lack any form of a professional tone. For example, you do not beg, even as a joke, about sexualising a member of staff, no matter the context. (For context, meow was singing "Måneskin - I Wanna Be Your Slave", but still, it feels incredibly creepy of a comment to make.)

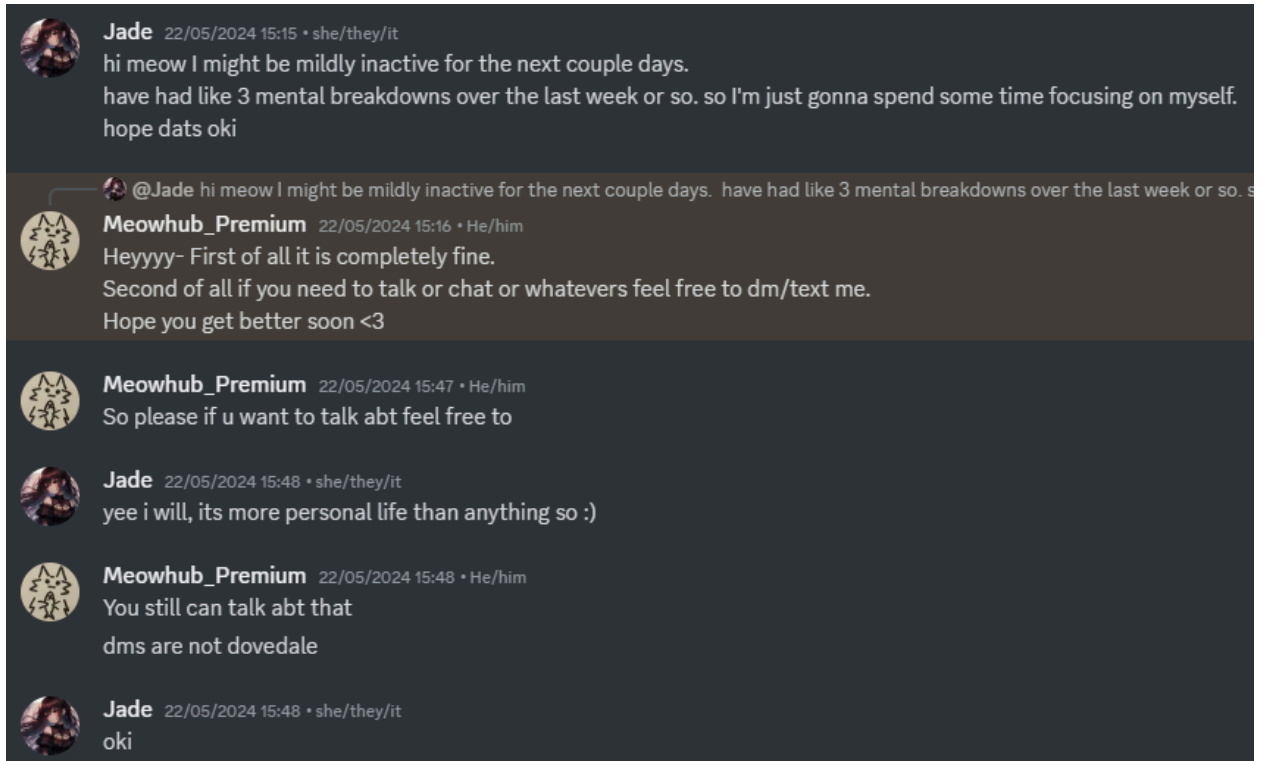

Meow has also been incredibly clingy- or at least that's the best way I can define it- to the point its adding to the previous comments he made.

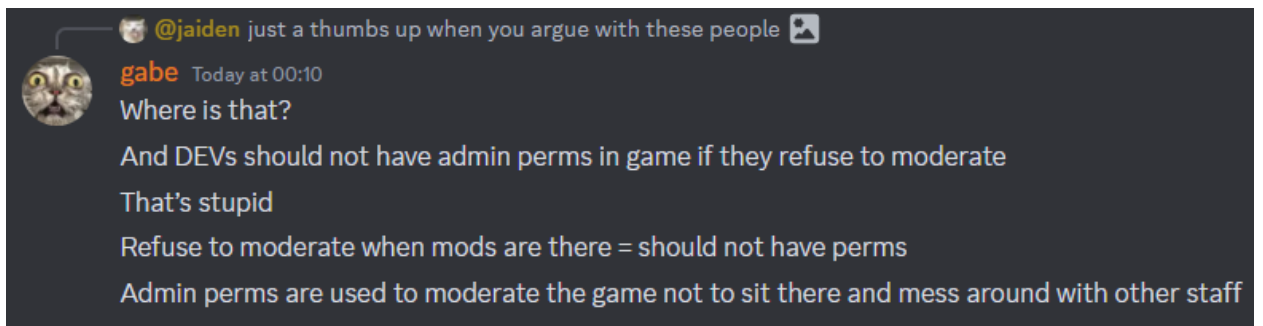

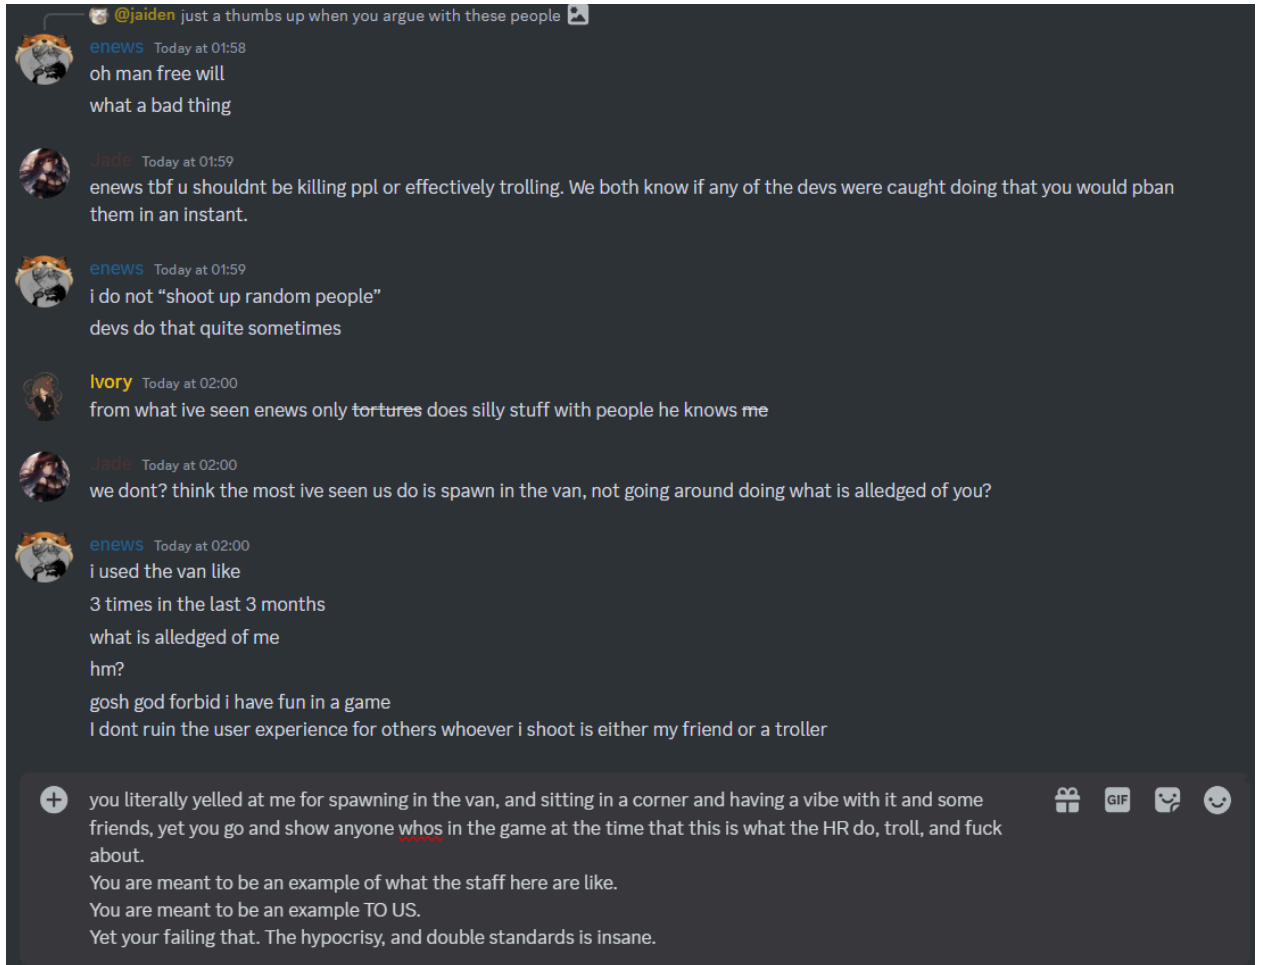

Meow also has refused to care when members of his team abuse their powers.

I'd give Meow a little leeway with this, as, due to him being German, he may not get the sentiment I tried to get across, of it being a personal thing I don't wish to talk about with him.

- 3) This links to the last point and the next. Us devs have been constantly belittled by pretty much all other teams. The community director, who, to my knowledge, doesn't manage the staff, but manages the community, has effectively bullied me into my recent LOA, constantly threatening that they will remove me from staff, while the actual staff manager has been nothing but kind and pleasant to me. Additionally, enews has barely ever actually followed their own rules. For example, they constantly spam soundboards when they join us in voice channels, yet get pissed off when anyone else does. Furthermore, several on the moderation team have refused to acknowledge the fact that us devs are new, hence why we don't moderate if there is active staff online who are aware how to, and have done so for ages.

- 4) Furthermore, us devs, we were never taught about anything dovedale related. There was no introduction, no meeting to teach us about commands, nothing. I wouldn't care about this that much, but, due to the fact one of the new devs had literally joined dovedale in the same month the applications were released. This same dev has gone on to delete several players in DEX, and trolled the server in several aspects, but was never punished for this. Note, during the writing of this resignation notice, NotInService, the developer I was on about during this, was permanently excluded from the development team. Their primary reason for this was due to previous moderation.
- 5) I feel that the HR team has been beyond lenient with users' punishment history. For example, one of the notable faces in the community, Paul has over 20 warnings, and staff have been told for over a month that the next punishment is a permanent ban, yet he still receives more and more warnings every week. Furthermore, Flowery. Do I need to say more?

- 6) I also feel like there are certain members of management who force themselves into other areas of the team, like, enews trying to push themselves upon the development team, when Meow - Alex - Jaiden are the Chain of Command within their region, especially since enews has gotten development information consistently wrong and acts entitled in relation to this (just look at the testers channel).
- 7) Additionally, no one in the team, other than Jaiden and AMA, actually knows how to be nice.

- 8) Finally, the bottom line, I do not believe dovedale has listened to Blu or any of the other staff who have left. For example, they removed Raye, and replaced him with Meowhub, who still clearly has no management experience, and even outsiders are noticing the lack of structure the development team, and the wider dovedale staff team have.
