

It's Not Tony's Birthday

Amanda Fabans

“Article about Tony: out of shape unemployed loud man begs for subs every morning,” said Tony Rose, YNOT_BE_CASTING, before loading up his game for more Halo Infinite. Little did he know it would be another day of streaming on Twitch after the HCS Majors in Charlotte, North Carolina, from Feb. 24 to Feb. 26 in 2021. It would also be another day of birthday wishes before his birthday in November.

Tony would begin his journey in 2008 playing Halo 2 on the Xbox. He would then discover competitive gaming with Halo 3 and would keep competing until Halo 4. He would start commentating when Halo 5 competition had hit the ground running and continue into Halo Infinite.

“My favorite series I casted was FaZe vs Sentinels,” said Tony in reference to the HCS Majors in Raleigh, North Carolina, in 2021. “At the end I yelled “These are the stats, these are the papers,” then tossed them yelling: “Forget the papers!”” The crowd would erupt in laughter, including his co-caster, Alex, TheShyway. Tony would reflect on that day and say it would be a symbol of a starting point for his new future.

When he is not casting professional Halo matches, Tony would be streaming Halo on Twitch. While he grinds for the Onyx rank, his viewers would troll him with birthday wishes when the birthday is not until November. “The birthday troll gag is really funny. I love it to be honest and I play into it as if I hate it,” said Tony. The joke came from a command set up by his moderators, and every time someone typed the command in the chat there would be a happy birthday message.

If you want to learn more about competitive Halo, or if you are searching for a new entertainer to watch on Twitch, Tony streams every day at 10:00pm EST. “At the end of the day I get to do 2 things I love: Talk Halo and entertain through this.” I recommend you login to Twitch and say hi to Tony and the community and learn more about the game of Halo. Don't forget to wish Tony a happy birthday!