Abstract: Written in the language chosen by the author either Indonesian or English. Briefly describes: (1) the purpose or context of the research; (2) the research question or focus of the problem; (3) the research method; (4) the result in the article; (5) and the simple conclusion. The abstract must be within 150-250 words.

Keywords: keyword; keyword; keyword; keyword; keyword.

INTRODUCTION

The introduction provides background information on a topic that the author has focused on and should place its research in the context of academic debate (with previous research) elaborating the theory, concept paradigm, perspective, or scientific trends. Then the author should come up with a research question or focus on the issue in the article. Highlight the gap between kinds of research and emerging state-of-the-art so that the article has novelty.

METHOD

The author must describe the methods that have been used in detail and logically, as well as their stage in the attempt to engage in scientific debate or in the effort to answer questions raised. The primary and secondary data used along with the techniques of collection, processing or analysis, should be described here (it does not contain a set of definitions).

RESULT AND DISCUSSION

In this section, the author explains more about the results of his research. This could be a theoretical and/or methodological argument that is reflective, or it could be a description of field findings in simple, straightforward, and scientific language. If the discussion has more than one sub-theme or section, the author should divide it into sections or sub-themes by providing subheadings (each part must be discussed individually).

Subheading A

If numbering is required, it is recommended that you write it using the following example:

- 1) Example 1
- 2) Example 2
 - a. Example a
 - b. Example b

If direct quotations are required, it is recommended to write them using the following example:

“Direct quotations are written in separate paragraphs, with an intended position of approximately 1.25 cm on the left and right sides. The font size used is 9 pt. Authors are advised to use the copy formatting feature to copy the surrounding style settings in this template.” (Editor, 2023).

Subheading B

Illustrations in this template, such as pictures, maps, charts, tables, etc., must be adjusted to a proportional size and must be files in (*.jpg) format. The author must write a caption for the illustration, following the example below:

If the size of the illustration is too large and the file size is too large, then it can be categorised as a supporting instrument and should be attached to a separate document file as supplementary file.

CONCLUSION

The conclusion is not a summary of the points that have been raised in the discussion. It should be a statement, a note, an implication, a closing comment, or a suggestion from the main idea of the article or the main answer to the problem.

REFERENCES

Provide only the APA 7th Edition style model references in this article, with a minimum of 18 references (80% from scientific journal articles, 20% from books or other sources). The references listed are cited in the body notes (footnotes are not recommended). You need to use a Reference Manager application such as Mendeley, Zotero, or Endnote. Citation should copied or extracted from an indexing website such as Google Scholar, Garuda, Sinta, Dimensions, Moraref, Scilit, BASE, Web of Science, Science Direct, ect., or from the citation features of the journal websites.
