

Current Base Pricing (2023-01-01 onwards)

Due to the inflation and current war with Russia, living costs have skyrocketed and I've had to increase my fees. The fee also differs depending on what direction you want me to translate in. Japanese to English is significantly easier for me and so it will be a fair bit cheaper than the other way around.

Japanese to English	Right now, they sit at 20 yen per Japanese symbol which in turn is roughly equal to 0.15 USD per symbol. For reference, a "standard" page in Japanese literature contains 400 symbols, which means 8000 yen (or 60 USD) "per page" on average.
English to Japanese	The fee for English to Japanese translations sit at 0.2 per English word which in turn is roughly equal to 30 yen per word. For reference, a "standard" page in English literature contains 250 words, which means 50 USD (or 7500 yen) "per page" on average.

Value Added Tax (25%)

Since I live in the European Union, and am doing this as a proper business, I have to pay VAT to the EU. How much VAT I pay is determined on a yearly basis, but it's been a stable 25% for the last decade, so I do not expect it to change in the near future. This tax will be added to the final price and is calculated from the base price.

Paypal Fees (3.5%)

I take my payments mainly through Paypal (I am currently looking for a reliable alternative, so this might change), which means I have to pay 3.5% of every transfer as a fee for using their services. To compensate for this, I add an equal increase to the final price.

Additional Fees

In addition to what's been mentioned above, which is the bare minimum, there are also additional circumstances that might increase costs further.

Urgency	If the commission needs to be completed within 48 hours, it will be considered an urgent commission and the price will increase by an additional 25%.
Complex	If the commission contains complex language, such as extensive scientific or medical terms, or has an excessive amount of story-unique terms, it will be considered a complex commission and the price will increase by an additional 25%.
Content	If the commission contains content that rubs me the wrong way, regardless of reasons, I will mostly still be up for doing it but the cost will increase by an additional 25%.

Disliked Content

As mentioned above, there is content I do not enjoy working with. A lot of this is very dependent on my mood and mental state when I am presented with the commission, which makes it very hard to narrow down what I do and do not enjoy working with. However, there are a handful of genres/tags that I dislike regardless of mood. Futanari, Cuckoldry and Reverse-Bestiality are the ones that spring to mind right now, but if I figure out more, I will add them here. Note that cuckoldry is not the same as netorare. Netorare is something I very much enjoy.

Negative Content - Scat, Guro and Certain Types of Vore. Any commission that contains this will be automatically declined.