Hello Fantasy Reader!!!

How was your last reading session after our last meeting?

Did any book excite you, with its unique magic system or maybe it terrified you, with its slow and careful tension-building?

Did your mind get entangled in a complex murder mystery...

Inside a spaceship where the crew were secretly alien agents from outer space, seeking the next planet for colonization?

Feel free to tell me about it at (link leading to a team forum)

You see...sometimes while reading a book, I come across that cliché chapter...

When the main character overcomes a challenge and comes out the other side is better, stronger.

At that moment he takes a ride through his memory lane...

And discovers just how much he has changed and developed...from his past self...

Those moments often guide me to do the same thing...

Take a look back...

When all of this started... My mission was and still is to gather the best fantasy stories out there...

Stories that gave people a window to another world...

Life...

Perspective...

That's what books mean to me...

Lives we will never live...

Circumstances we will never get ourselves into...

And choices we will never encounter.

What's the point some people ask?

It's all in our imagination anyway, why bother?

That's a fair objection, and it is mostly correct.

Correct in the way that the events are imaginary, but the emotions books are capable of evoking are not...

The tears, the laughter, the fear, and the suspense are real...

Real to us!!!

Emotions sent from universes light-years away...inside our imaginations.

I leave you with this question: When was the last time a book really shook you emotionally and why?

Ponder on this, and when you are ready...

Hello, Fantasy Reader!

How was your recent reading session since our last encounter?

Did any book captivate you with its unique magic system, or perhaps send shivers down your spine with its meticulously crafted suspense?

Did your thoughts become entangled in a labyrinthine murder mystery—inside a spaceship, where the crew harbored hidden identities as alien agents, scouring the cosmos for a new home?

Feel free to share your experiences with us on our dedicated forum (link).

You see, while immersed in the pages of a book, I often stumble upon that familiar chapter—a moment when the protagonist conquers a challenge and emerges profoundly transformed.

In those instances, they take a stroll down memory lane, uncovering the profound evolution from their former self.

These moments inspire me to do the same—to reflect and look back.

Back to the genesis of it all—when this quest to unearth the finest fantasy tales commenced.

Stories that unlock windows to alternate realms, breathing life into different perspectives—becoming more than just words on a page.

For me, books encapsulate lives we'll never lead, circumstances we'll never encounter, and choices we'll never face.

"Why does it matter?" you might wonder.

After all, it's a realm of imagination, so why invest?

A valid inquiry, and to some extent, it holds truth.

While the events may exist only within our minds, the emotions they ignite are remarkably real.

The tears shed, laughter shared, heart-pounding fear, and gripping suspense—all of it, genuine.

Emotions traversing light-years of space, resonating within the confines of our imagination.

As we conclude, allow me to pose a question: Can you recall the last time a book truly stirred your emotions, and what compelled this profound impact?

Contemplate this, and when you're prepared, we eagerly await your insights, shared at \(link\).
