

Alright, I gotta talk about this since some dork decided to bring up old dirt.

Tuxedo Boi, the same person who slandered, lied, gatkeeped, & attempted to force me to end my own life posted a private video where I was basically losing my cool saying the N word while giving a testimony against a notorious pedophile.

I will not deny, yes that's me speaking. But you need to understand at the time, I had just experienced some very messed up shit & I had been called very horrific things. Because I was upset at the time combined with anger, I didn't care what I said on that interview, so I ended up not caring what word I said on there.

Was it very bad to say that? Yes.

Does that define who I am as a person? No.

I do not tolerate racism in any way. Though I've had an unfortunate history of saying the N word more than once.

The first time was by complete accident because at the time, I didn't know what it meant. Until someone ended up informing me of what it meant, causing me to instantly panic & remove the post.

And then the third time, I was being very edgy at the time & ended up saying the "scramble like an egg" meme. That time, I didn't think straight. And honestly I never do, so when I said that, I didn't realize what I got myself into.

Since then, I haven't said the word in any capacity. However, Tuxedo Boi still believes I'm the same edgy kid from back then, so with malice, he maliciously posted the video, & called for that I "deserve" deplatformation, saying I had been "hiding" this "hidden" secret for years.

First off, it was not hidden. I sent the testimony to my then friend AFX, who did censoring before it came out the way most of you have seen it. But somehow, Tuxedo Boi got his hands on the raw interview, splicing it to not include the rest of the interview, giving context to the circumstances of the time. And then he shows a screenshot of an immature community note I made when people were outraged at me, however, I didn't say the N word then because the rest of the word I put in @ # $ % ! symboles. And I'm pretty sure using those symboles is fine right?

I don't know if it is, but if it isn't then that would be an unintentional fourth.

And despite the harassment disclaimer, Tuxedo Boi has harassment intent. He knows what's going to happen: People are gonna get outraged, & try to seek me out. (Which was what happened in 2024, that led to my youngest sister being dragged into it, forcing me to intervene).

Not to mention this guy also has his own skeletons in his closet. I won't say what they are, but they aren't exactly moral either. And I'm sure he'll try to say I'm framing him. No I'm not, and there WAS proof of this too. Tuxedo Boi simply wiped all his socials of any evidence to hide those skeletons to make himself seem like the bright aperture of justice.

By the way, as an update: Tuxedo Boi has made the claim that his actions of the past are irrelevant. NO they are not. Telling someone to take their own life & mocking them for being doxxed is extremely serious, because the person could possibly get hurt or killed. And false claims can never be taken back. So saying this is "irrelevant" should raise several red flags. And by the way, when he said he doesn't hate me, he's lying. Why would you say that when you called for deplatformation? And also, my friends were not trying to help.

Already, he's caused severe damage, even causing some of my own friends to turn on me, forcing me to end my collaboration with them permamanently. I do not intend to earn their trust back, or ever work with/for them again. They don't understand me like my parents do, or very few people online do.

I feel so misunderstood for who I really am, and I fucking hate that people jump to conclusions before trying to get a better understand of what happened & what the conditions of that were.

I'm going to be hopping off social media to focus on my mental well being since I'm starting to gain very negative thoughts of myself. And seriously, I've never felt so close to wanting to harm myself in actual years. I don't want to follow through with them, thus I'm going offline, letting my team handle the rest.

These old actions don't define who I am today, and I seriously have doubts people will ever believe that. So many people have shut me out to the point I feel as if my parents are the only human beings in the universe who can truly understand me. They've been part of my life ever since my birth, & I feel that's all I have.

I'm actually on the verge of tears, so I'm gonna hop offline.

Thanks for reading, & wish me luck.
