SPAIN (Museums, Cathedrals & Sun-Drenched Charm)

1. The Pleasure Seekers (1964) – A frothy musical romp with Ann-Margret, shot in Madrid and Barcelona. Glossy, colorful, and full of iconic Spanish backdrops.
 2. The Spanish Gardener (1956) – A British drama with Dirk Bogarde, filmed in Almería. Not a comedy, but the Andalusian scenery is stunning.
 3. The Vault of Horror (1973) – A horror anthology, but the Segovia and Toledo locations add Gothic grandeur (if you're in the mood for something spooky-but-pretty).

SOUTH OF FRANCE (Riviera Glamour & Wit)

1. The Truth About Spring (1965) – Hayley Mills in a nautical comedy shot in Corsica and Sardinia (feels very Mediterranean).
 2. The Light at the Edge of the World (1971) – Kirk Douglas in a pirate adventure filmed in Menorca. More action than comedy, but the cliffs and turquoise water are jaw-dropping.
 3. The Party's Over (1965) – A darkly comic British film shot in Nice, with Oliver Reed and Eddie Albert. Moody but gorgeous.

MEDITERRANEAN-ADJACENT (Islands & Coastal Vibes)

1. Boy on a Dolphin (1957) – Sophia Loren in Hydra, Greece. A treasure-hunting romp with postcard-perfect scenery.
 2. The Secret of Santa Vittoria (1969) – Anthony Quinn in an Italian village comedy (not coastal, but the Tuscan hills feel Mediterranean).
 3. Summer Madness (1955) – Katharine Hepburn in Venice. A romantic drama, but the canals and palazzos are pure eye candy.

If You Loved the Museum Scenes:

- How to Steal a Million (1966) – Audrey Hepburn and Peter O'Toole in a Parisian art-heist comedy (not Spain, but the Louvre scenes are delightful).
 - Topkapi (1964) – A heist comedy filmed in Istanbul's Topkapi Palace, with Peter Ustinov hamming it up.

Bonus: Spy-Lite & Euro-Capers

- Kaleidoscope (1966) – Warren Beatty in a cheeky caper shot in London and Nice.
- The Assassination Bureau (1969) – Diana Rigg and Oliver Reed in a steampunk-ish romp across Europe (including Venice).

Let me know if you'd like:

- More art-centric films (e.g., The Venetian Affair for 1960s Venice).
 - Female-led adventures (like The King's Thief with Ann Blyth).
 - Deeper cuts from a specific decade (the 1950s are packed with location shoots).

Spain (Obscure but Gorgeous)

1. The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe (1954) – Luis Buñuel's color-saturated adaptation, shot in Manzanillo, Mexico (standing in for the Caribbean). Not Spain, but the tropical vibes are impeccable.
 2. The Lovers of Toledo (1953) – A Franco-Italian co-production filmed in Toledo's labyrinthine streets, dripping with Old World romance.
 3. The Singer of Mexico (1956) – Luis Mariano's operetta-style musical, showcasing Sevilla's Alcázar and flamenco flair.

South of France (Forgotten Charms)

1. The Little Rebels (1955) – A French comedy shot in Saint-Tropez, back when it was a sleepy fishing village. Pure Provençal whimsy.
 2. Lola Montès (1955) – Max Ophüls' visually stunning circus drama, partly filmed in Nice and Antibes. A Technicolor fever dream.
 3. The House of the Angel (1957) – Argentine-French co-production with Riviera scenes; moody but breathtaking.

Italy (Beyond the Usual Suspects)

1. It Happened in Rome (1955) – A lightweight romp with Vittorio De Sica, showcasing Rome's fountains and piazzas.
 2. The Miller's Beautiful Wife (1955) – Sophia Loren in a rustic comedy shot in Puglia's sunbaked villages.
 3. A Day in Court (1954) – Alberto Sordi's satire, filmed in Naples' chaotic streets.

Greece & Islands (Pre-"Zorba" Era)

1. The Barefoot Battalion (1953) – A WWII drama shot in Crete, with jaw-dropping cliffside vistas.
 2. The Lovers of the Aegean (1957) – A French-Greek romance filmed on Hydra, all whitewashed houses and turquoise water.

Ultra-Obscure Wildcards

- The Golden Salamander (1950) – Trevor Howard in a Tunis-set thriller (North Africa, but Mediterranean-adjacent).
- The Ship of Condemned Women (1953) – A pulpy Italian adventure shot in Sardinia's Costa Smeralda.
