The purpose of an Opt-In page is to provide free value in exchange for your audience's contact details. The reasoning behind this, is that it automatically builds a strong bridge of trust with your audience. Also, whenever you need to contact them in future, maybe to let them know you have a discount on your products or maybe if you have a new product etc, You won't need to advertise it on your social media JUST to get their attention. You will have direct access to them so you can send promotional emails straight to them. (something I also have a skill for) so when they receive your emails, they will not second guess whether they trust you enough to buy from you. That trust will have already been installed in their subconscious because you have already provided them with value for free already. This is a great soft sales method used by the biggest companies of the modern world and has been proven to be a beneficial method to implement into their marketing.

Let me know what you think of it.

All the best,

Azad Kavak.
