

An August Night

by Seamus Heaney

His hands were warm and small and knowledgeable

When I saw them again last night, they were two ferrets,

Playing all by themselves in a moonlit field.