My rights:

- Payment will be taken upfront. This benefits both me (the artist) and you (the commissioner), since it ensures that I will be paid for my efforts and it gives you the freedom to ask for a refund if you have to cancel the commission for whatever reason.
- I primarily use Paypal but can use other payment avenues since I know it's not a great platform for NSFW art.
- Please send photo references of your character(s). It's difficult and time consuming to draw out the concepts for it without a visual accompaniment.
 - While optional, having references specifically showing what sort of pose or expression you want helps immensely.
- You must credit me if you post the art under your account.

Your rights:

- You are entitled to a refund if you decide to decline the commission after payment (in the event you cannot afford the commission or change your mind for any other reason).
 - The amount refunded will be determined based on what stage I am into the drawing process.
- You are free to discuss deadlines if you need the drawing finished within a certain time, but with the caveat that I need enough time to finish it, so please allow me a minimum of one week to finish the piece (depending on how many other slots are available at that time).

Process:

- You will send me the commission info with what characters/scenes you want drawn. From there, we will discuss payment and possible deadlines if you need the drawing finished within a certain date, which I'll finalise with a quote.
- You will give me your email address so I can send an invoice for you to make the payment into my payment account.
- Once payment is received, I will start work on the drawing.
- Throughout each stage, I will give you progress updates with pictures, from sketch to lines to colours to shading. This is to make sure you're happy with what's being drawn, and also gives you the chance to suggest last minute changes. Significant changes will incur more costs.
