

LETTERS TO

I'm writing to share a feel-good story, courtesy of four hard-working, socially-distanced members of the Hanover High School boys' soccer team.

They agreed to stack wood for a neighbor, and decided to donate their wages to a local charity. Their hard work impressed the generous neighbor, former Dartmouth coach Whit Mitchell, so much that he increased the donation, and after a hard day's work the foursome had earned $1,000 for LISTEN. The four rising Hanover seniors are Nathan Subrahmanian, Henry Aspinwall, Mitch Aspinwall, and Pierce Hamlin. (That's why Henry and Mitch are standing so close in the photo: they're brothers). Commented Subrahmanian, one of Hanover's 2020 Captains, "We have always tried to think of the big picture as a team, and make charitable fundraising an annual tradition. This is a great way to start off the coming season, come what may." I am so impressed that these boys are able to think about the needs of their neighbors in the Upper Valley, and not fret about the uncertainty of the coming season.
