

SL: They mocked me until I started to speak

My English teacher mocked me in front of the entire class and said this.

He's too poor to afford his brain to learn. Let him sleep...

I traced her face and stared at her weak, pale, and selfish face.

And this day, I made a commitment.

A commitment that I wasn't going to break by any chance.

It was 12 AM when I mindlessly surfed the net and looked for that speaking secret.

But, nothing came up.

And I thought my story ended there until...

I found an old newspaper that said:

"Here's the only part your teacher seeks in your speech...."

Below, I found that it wasn't any grammar, vocabulary, and so on.

At first, I was a bit skeptical, but when I read it...

Everything changed.

The next morning, I knew that I would get my first, guaranteed A.

So, I packed my things up and went to my first class, which was - English.

I arrived, sat on my broken chair and the teacher called me

The class started laughing and mocking me, like every other time.

But when I started speaking...

I froze their souls.

Their Mouths-open, faces-frozen.

Plus, some of them had closed their eyes.

But what the teacher did, is unforgettable.

She was so ashamed that she ran out of the classroom with tears on her face.

After a few minutes, she returned with a huge apology letter and a giant milk chocolate bar.

The entire class apologized and pleaded me to forgive them all lesson long.

After class, some smartest & coolest classmates instantly offered me to be in their friend group.

But, I just looked into their faces, said nothing, and walked home.

From A1 to C2 in an hour - effortlessly.

That's where this old, grandma's newspaper led me to.

Stuck in the speaking hole and looking for an effortless, guaranteed A every time a speaking comes up?
