

Anne-Rachel Inne is the Director, ITU Regional office for Africa in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Before joining ITU she was the Senior Vice-President Government Affairs Department at the American Registry for Internet Numbers (ARIN) and the organisation's primary link to Governments of US, Canada and about 25 Caribbean Economies. Anne-Rachel worked at the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN) as Vice President Government Engagement in Geneva, Switzerland and in several other positions for 12 years, including policy analyst and Head of Europe office in Brussels. She also worked as the Chief Operations Officer (COO) of the Africa Regional Registry, AFRINIC, taking care of operations and Governments' engagement in the Registry's public policies process.

She is proud to have worked at the International Institute for Communications and Development (IICD) in The Hague, Netherlands (1998-2001) as several countries' Programme Manager directing multi sector social development projects that were early adopters of ICT/Internet. She produced and publicized Learning by Doing: Lessons emerging from the ICT Stories Projects for the benefits of our projects and the wider community. Anne-Rachel was a member of the Internet Technical Advisory Committee (ITAC) for the Africa Information Society Initiative (AIS), the continent's first roadmap to the information society. A founding member of most African Internet organisations, she was a member of the Bureau of the African Group at WSIS as a representative of the African Private Sector and a Member of the Gender Coalition during WSIS. Anne-Rachel was an entrepreneur and consultant in the ICT4D sector and a founding member of the African Enterprise Network (AEN) in 1997 and is featured as ICT Expert in the ILO/IOM book for the AUC: African Women at the Service of the Union.
