- Compared autistic people to Frankenstein's Monster while talking about his part as the Creature in a production of Frankenstein: "It's basically being a man child, it's being a man infant. And then, psychologically, Danny and Nick Dear, who's adapted the Mary Shelley novel, into a brilliant 2 ½ hour play version of it, he, they both have autistic sons. So we went to two extraordinary schools and met some high spectrum autistic kids. And it was very, very humbling and amazing and very upsetting, but very, very extraordinary as well, and inspiring. He's very much someone who is carried through life, as someone who is so different, not only because of his appearance, but because of these behavioral tics, which are very autistic, um, both in his understanding of the world, psychologically and emotionally, but also physically as well, how that manifests later in his body. And so that was the major part of the preparation." (Explanation/ analysis at the link)

- Said he had been “castigated as a moaning, rich, public-school b, complaining about only getting posh roles”
- About the 2011 London riots: “ ”I’m a Prince of Wales Trust ambassador, so I’m all about giving youth an education, a voice and a chance to not take the wrong road. But those eejits saying they’re doing it for socio-political reasons? Fuck off, no you’re not, you’re on a jolly and you’re getting away with it. It makes me want to belt them, make them lame for a bit so they’re dependent on other people’s mercy... It’s very hard for me to talk about it, because I came from an incredibly privileged bubble so the minute I open my mouth I can sense the comeback of, ‘What the fuck do you know?’ And that’s fair. But my sympathy is with the people who do know what they’re talking about, who have been brought up on estates and live morally decent, contributing lives and who have seen opportunists destroying all their work.”
- About Elementary, the American version of Sherlock ”I did say [to Jonny], ‘Well, I’d prefer you didn’t do it but you’ve got a kid to feed, a nice house in LA and a wife to keep in good clothes.’ When you get used to a certain standard of living and they waft a paycheck at you, what are you going to do?”
- “I look in a mirror and I see all the faults I’ve lived with for 35 years and yet people go kind of nuts for certain things about me.”
- “I know I’m no technical expert but I do love trying to sort of dance with the camera. And

- "Those slightly mad eyes which became sadly a lot madder which became part of the tragedy of Jeremy's life"
- "Martin has much more intuitive brilliance than I have which would make him an asexual sociopath. Not that Martin Freeman is an asexual sociopath but he's just far quicker at thinking than I am."
- Said he thought Sherlock's haircut was "womanly"
- "Being a posh actor in England, you can't escape class-typing, from whatever side you look at it. I realised quite early on that, although I wasn't trying to make a career speciality of it, I was playing slightly asexual, sociopathic intellectuals" Wow that must be so hard for you Benny. - "I want to be able to play trailer-bound fatties in a Judd Apatow comedy"
- "In America I could play everything from trailer-trash to Harvard-educated"

- “We’ve reached a state now where it’s, ‘You shouldn’t notice. Why are you noticing he’s got a bomb and has a beard and is Muslim and wants to kill your family?’”
- “There is no country in the world like this. If all of a sudden all the traffic wardens in Ghana were Welsh, they’d really notice and might not love it. We give ourselves a hard time in this country in a sort of mea culpa way. But if we were that racist, people wouldn’t come. Very simple.”

- “I really liked hip-hop until the gangsta rap took over. I come from a time when not every rap record was '[n-word]' this and '[n-worda]' that; an earlier socially and morally conscious hip-hop sensibility, when it was, 'Don't call people [n-word]'. But now it's [n-word], [n-word], [n-word] and it's not funny or interesting politically, artistically or socially. I really don't like it.” (Note that he didn't say “n-word”, he said the actual word itself).
- “The funny thing about the acting business is that there are more pfs in it than you can have hot dinners thrown at you. But no one is out. It's not so bad here, but in Hollywood? Jesus Christ. Why don't they just admit it? No one cares if they're gay or not. I certainly don't.”
- “I met Lucy Liu at the Emmy's who was charming, but very ugly. She's a dog, come on, she's a very unattractive woman.”
- “Standing outside a location trailer is Martin Freeman. He is notably not wearing the safety helmets that are mandatory for everyone else on set, and is in the middle of explaining to one of the Sherlock runners – who is wearing her safety helmet – just why this is.
“I'm a big fish, you see, love,” he says, sipping at his tea. “I'm... Johnny Big Bollocks. And you're... you're... what's that stuff whales eat? Krill. You're krill. Location krill. Krill wears a helmet.” ”

- "He makes a comment about Una Stubbs that it would be inappropriate to repeat in The Times. ("I've been flirting with Una," he concludes, after the bad story. "Well, it's actually sexual aggression, but I often find the line between the two quite blurry.""
- How his partner Amanda Abbington describes their first meeting: "Martin walked in and I just had a thunderbolt. It dawned on me: "Oh, God it's him!" We flirted with each other all day and when I went home he texted me, saying "You left and I wasn't done flirting with you. That's a bit rude", which I thought was really smooth."
- "I've got drugs. I can just make them [mimes falling over]. Slip them something in their goblet. Some will get offended by that now, because they'll call it rape or whatever. But, you know, for me it's a helping hand."

Chris Evans

1) When asked if he'd rather do a love scene with Sandra Bullock or Salma Hayek, he replied, "Salma Hayek. Sandy [Sandra Bullock] is more the one you settle down with, set up shop with, take home to your mother. But Salma's the one you yell, 'Action!' and just go to town."

2) Made comments (with Jeremy Renner) about Scarlett Johansson's character Natasha Romanoff (The Black Widow), where the two called her a 'slut' and a 'whore'. Chris also laughed at a joke in this interview, in which Jeremy said (about Johansson's character) "She has a prosthetic leg anyways.", as if being disabled makes you undesirable???

I'm a big fan of Chris, but these comments are definitely not okay with me. Slut-shaming is so not cool, Cap.

- Used the “n-word” twice in an interview, while defending the actions of his racist character.
- Choice quotes from an interview about his role as a Neo-Nazi in the movie Ned

- Describes the character as “not really a Nazi” and a “poor twisted soul.”

-If you “take it too seriously” you “probably shouldn’t see the movie.”

-Says the movie, which is about a fucking NEO-NAZI FALLING “IN LOVE” WITH A BLACK WOMAN “isn’t about racism.” To him, it’s about “people with problems and how they choose to deal with them.”

-Describes it as “sweet and endearing.”

(from brashblacknonbeliever)

- Used the slur “t*y” during an interview.
- Conflates trans*women and crossdressers

Jennifer Lawrence

- Thinks that OCD is “cool” and “quirky” (Meanwhile, she is being proclaimed some sort of hero of mental health for her work in Silver Linings Playbook. She is not my hero)
- Talks about how her female cat has such a masculine energy that she decided to rename it Chaz Bono: “I’ve never met a cat where you assume first that it’s a boy. Because normally dogs are boys and cats are girls. But she has such a masculine energy that everybody always says ‘he’ and for the first week I thought it was a boy. I named her Oliver, she had a collar with Oliver. And like “boy, boy, boy.” And everyone’s like, “what’s his name?” And that’s just weird for a cat. So we call her Chaz Bono.”
- Describes her character Katniss Everdeen as “strong, like a male hero with a vagina” (because she thinks female heroes can’t be strong, or that men can’t have vaginas)
- “In Hollywood, I’m obese. I’m considered a fat actress. I eat like a caveman. I’ll be the only actress who doesn’t have anorexia rumors”
- Responded to backlash against her being cast in the Hunger Games due to whitewashing by saying “ “The cool thing about Katniss is that every fan has such a personal relationship with her, and they understand and know her in a singular way. I’m a massive fan too, so I get it.” “ and not actually addressing the whitewashing

But when MIA did it at the Super Bowl, people said it was "obscene", "completely inappropriate and very disappointing". It's no coincidence that people thought it was cute when a white woman did it, but disgusting when a WOC did it. It's just racism.

Unless I'm completely wrong, I mean, she is 100 years old, she definitely had time for a lesbian phase." You know, because bisexual women don't ever sleep with men or have children. Also, bisexuality is not a 'lesbian phase'. It's a legitimate sexuality.

[tw rape culture] the thing about michael fassbender...

...is that he's a domestic violence committing, female co-star intimidating asshole. You can read the details of what he did to his female partner at the link.

Regarding his treatment of female costars: Keira Knightley didn't want him spanking her during one of their scenes in a film & said so while tied up; in reply he said "Keira, you're tied to a bed. You're not really in a position to say that." So when a woman is obviously scared and uncomfortable, his response is to scare her further, really make her feel her powerlessness to control what happens to her body. So that happened. And then some of his fans talked shit about her for not fully appreciating how wonderful it would be to get nonconsensually struck by him.

Basically, I don't understand the attraction at all. I don't understand. I want to push him out an airlock every time I have to see his hateful face. I want him and every other man who abuses women off my fucking planet. Kinda now.

But, yanno, I also want to shout "he freaking beat his wife!" whenever I see Sean Penn, so I guess I'm just a ~sensitive bitch~.

I find it interesting that I see their faces on my dash
