Tanner Bibee over 5.5 strikeouts

Analysis:

The Guardians hand the ball to Tanner Bibee in a must-win spot, and his strikeout stuff will be key from the jump. The right-hander punched out 162 hitters in 182 1/3 innings this year, and he draws a Detroit lineup that finished bottom five in MLB in strikeout rate, averaging nearly nine per game. Even if Bibee doesn't get a long leash in an elimination setting, his ability to rack up whiffs quickly gives him a strong path to six strikeouts before the bullpen door opens. That makes the Over 5.5 Ks the sharper side here. There's no information about the public or sharp sides of this play.

MLB: Cincinnati Reds vs Los Angeles Dodgers - 1 Unit (-135) - 9:08pm ET

Yoshinobu Yamamoto over 6.5 strikeouts

Analysis:

Yoshinobu Yamamoto takes the ball in a potential clincher, and the Dodgers will be counting on his strikeout arsenal to set the tone early. The rookie right-hander has been a nightmare for aggressive lineups, and Cincinnati fits that profile - ranking near the bottom of the league in chase rate while sitting top-10 in strikeouts against righties. Yamamoto's splitter has generated whiffs all year, and under the postseason lights he won't shy away from using it in big spots. Even if the leash shortens late, the matchup gives him plenty of paths to rack up seven Ks before the bullpen takes over. There's no information about the public or sharp sides of this play.
