

The Reeling Lotus

Upon approaching the stall, a sylvari greets you with a brief nod. Assisted by elemental magic, and flanked by tables, they prepare and package fish in a theatrical manner.

Above the sturdy, wooden tables, dozens of large water bubbles float gingerly, bumping against each other, without bursting or merging. A closer inspection reveals a school of fish, swimming inside each bubble.

The sylvari, once a sale is completed, retrieves the agreed upon fish. Either butchering it for the customer or freezing it and placing it inside of a dried lotus leaf. The stand's logo is branded on the outside of the leaf.
