Workshop

Building Classroom Community Through Culturally Responsive Pedagogy

Christina Otten

6–12 Online Educator
Kentwood Public Schools
Kentwood, MI

@ms_carbone

Workshop Description

This strand will teach participants how to build a strong community in your classroom through the incorporation of culturally responsive pedagogy (CRP). CRP includes elements of social emotional learning (SEL) along with diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) strategies. Through this hands-on workshop, Christina will guide you through the epistemology of these necessary practices so you can apply concepts to develop your own student-centered environment. You will be shown examples of CRP in: lesson design, execution, and the corresponding formative and summative assessments that reinforce the significance of these learning strategies. There will also be time to construct and develop lessons specifically for your classroom! Building classroom communities through CRP will amplify student voices and empower them to develop clarity and confidence in their own unique worldview.

Presenter Biography

Christina has been an educator for over 10 years in multiple inclusive settings in and outside of the classroom. She is dedicated to innovative communication; committed to effective and meaningful collaboration.
