

POLITICAL FACTORS AFFECTING DEVELOPMENT

Having spent the past couple of lessons considering the way in which development is a contested concept and evaluating some of the many different ways we can measure development indicators, we are now going to turn our attention to some of the factors that promote and inhibit development.

We will begin by considering political factors.

Obviously, we could group many different reasons under the heading 'political' but, in order to keep it simple, we will look at poor management, corruption and political instability (including conflict).

The reasons we will be examining are:

1. Poor Management
2. Corruption
3. Political Instability

You will be allocated to a group. You have this class period to produce the best quality mind map that you can. You will present your mind map to the class.

YOU SHOULD BE READY TO PRESENT IN OUR NEXT LESSON.

You can use the following resources for your mind map:
