INTRODUCTION (Garamond 12 pt, Bold, Uppercase)

(Garamond 12 pt) Introduction Contains background issues discussed in the article, contains no more than 20% of the article content.

The introduction contains 1) the background of the problem (presented briefly), 2) a review of literature or previous research (containing state of art) with the aim of justifying or strengthening the statement of novelty/significance of the research, or justifying the originality of writing and scientific contributions. References in literature reviews are strongly recommended from journals of the last 10 years. The originality or novelty statement is stated clearly to clarify the uniqueness and novelty of the article compared to previous research. It also aims to determine the significance and position of the research among other studies.

Quotations or citations must be paraphrased, not directly quoted/pasted in paragraphs. Should avoid citing using bullets and numbering.

METHODS (Garamond 12 pt, Bold, capitalize each word)

(Garamond 12 pt) The research method is included as a sub-chapter in the introduction, typed with a capital letter at the beginning, without bullets and numbering. The research objectives, formulation, scope, data collection techniques, data analysis techniques and other matters related to research methods are included in this sub-chapter and described in paragraphs.

Research methods should contain detailed information about the research location, number of respondents, techniques for determining and collecting data, and analysis techniques or validity tests. General terms do not need to be written in detail/definitively (eg: a questionnaire is….), just refer to a reference book.

RESULT AND DISCUSSION (Garamond 12 pt, Bold, Uppercase)

(Garamond 12 pt) The discussion contains the results of research and discussion. The discussion should contain an analysis of the research topic problem with the aim of finding the novelty and significance of the research..

The writing of the table formula is described in accordance with the discussion of the article and it is not necessary to write down the steps for calculating the formula. Tables containing raw data do not need to be presented except for comparison, tables only contain data that has been processed and ready to be analyzed. The table analysis is in the form of an analytical descriptive explanation (referring to the previous paragraph above), not explaining the table points such as "Based on the table above, the number of male students is 49 while the number of female students is 35..., and so on"..

Tables (Garamond 12 pt, Bold, capitalize each word)

Tables are numbered sequentially with the table title and number, and placed above the table. Tables are referenced in the text by table numbers eg. Table 1. Do not display vertical lines on the table. Only horizontal lines should be displayed in the table. Tables in the manuscript as far as possible on one page, do not continue to the next page, for the convenience of readers who read your manuscript.
