Our Bounty Spread Wide

With capital campaigns folks often think first of the building, but how is it that a shared financial commitment to maintaining and improving our building connects to outreach, to our people-to-people mission? Creating safer, more welcoming, sacred spaces spreads the message of love and inclusion beyond our congregation to the greater community. One of the ways we send this message best is by opening our doors to a wide range of community groups. In this way, our message of love:

crosses the age span (Scout Troop 154, 4-H Teen Conference, Active Retirement Association) supports the arts (Sacred Dance Circle Seacoast, Arts In Reach, student music recitals, the Hubbe Gallery) welcomes and supports varied identities (Black Lives Matter Seacoast, Seacoast Outright) embraces neuro-diverse others (Friends In Action, UNH Occupational Therapy Stroke Survivors Group) celebrates lives lived and joined lives (weddings, memorial services)
