They must apologize.

Through a video broadcast on television, we have been able to see what really happened during the moments after the fading of the Senegalese Mame Mbaye, in the Lavapiés neighborhood. The recording clearly shows how several municipal police officers in Madrid try to revive Mbaye, inertly on the ground, after suffering a cardiorespiratory arrest. Although the agents' performance was praiseworthy, I would even say that it was worthy of a decoration, they had to face the fallacies that several members of Podemos spread through social networks: Juan Carlos Monedero, Ramón Espinar and Rommy Arce , among others, openly blamed the Police for being directly responsible for the death of the Senegalese mantero. Some insulting hoaxes that brought anarchy to the neighborhood of Lavapiés for a day and a half. Thank God, once the facts have been known, tempers have become tempered. But the derision suffered by the Madrid Police deserves to be compensated. We can sing the mea culpa and apologize, both to them and the residents of Lavapiés, for all the damage they have done.