

Dear testers,

I want to thank each one of you sincerely for participating in the closed beta testing of my new watchface. Your valuable input and feedback have played an essential role in improving its quality and performance.

The closed testing phase is now complete, and I am excited to announce that the watchface is officially released and available to everyone!

Your help was crucial in making this possible, so once again—thank you very much for your time and effort.