

Red Water

One day George was having a shower and he fell in the bath. The water became red because of the blood. He was very afraid so he called the ambulance. When the doctors arrived George was already dead and with the face full of blood.

The doctors took the body to the hospital and next day the police took him to the cemetery, they didn't bury him.

The next year a family with two children moved to the house where George had lived. At night, one child wanted to have a shower. When he was taking a shower, suddenly the water became red and the boy started to cry and shout to his parents. When his parents went to the bathroom, the water became transparent again.
