

Beyond Instruction

Interested in discussing professional development for librarians? Wondering about librarians providing faculty development opportunities? What about webinars, sharing scholarship, programming, or other things that don't fit within the other categories? Then this Conversation Station is right for you!

Please appoint someone to help keep track of the ideas you discussed by taking notes in this Google Doc.

All of the Google Docs will then be made available to the rest of the IPAL IL Discussion Group so others can benefit from multiple discussions. You don't have to miss out on the conversation from one group because you decided to join another!

Continuing Education credits for faculty so that they have a professional incentive to attend library research sessions

The "After you Graduate" guide--it's not all on Google; or if it is, here's how to find it! Finding database alternatives for after graduation

Librarians who are nontenured faculty--what are our research expectations in terms of publishing and presenting?

Technology--if technical issues aren't in place, it's difficult to teach. Websites, searching issues, clickers, discovery services. Having to shift to teach students new systems.

Librarians involved with Centers for Teaching and Learning and professional development opportunities. For example, co-teaching a session on critical reading with an education faculty member, or co-teaching a session on designing effective PowerPoints, or developing an online course. Or a session for faculty on open access (invited guest speaker via Skype).
