

What Is Traditionally Served In An Irish Bar?

Irish pubs are known worldwide for their casual social atmosphere, hearty food and drink, sports, and traditional music. They have become a cornerstone of the Irish culture and whether you are a beer guzzler or teetotaler, they should be a part of your Ireland travel experience. Traditionally, the pub was owned and operated by a family called the publicans. The publican's family would often live upstairs. The pub was a "come one, come all" establishment designed for the blue-collar working class of Ireland. Today's Irish pubs can range from a small, dark, and intimate neighborhood bar to a large, bright and upscale restaurant with full table service. The ambiance and decor of the Irish pub is usually traditional and can be themed with memorabilia from the past including vintage beer paraphernalia or farm antiques.

The food served in an Irish pub is typically very simple and hearty. It is also relatively inexpensive. It can range from a traditional Irish stew or boxty to a hearty choice of meat and three sides such as mashed, roasted, or fried potatoes, cabbage, or carrots. The pub's selection of meat may include turkey, ham, beef, or fish. A full carvery is a popular option for Sunday lunch with family and friends.

Most of the beer served in an Irish pub is either a lager or a stout. Irish stout is dark and rich and has an almost chocolaty taste. It is brewed using roasted barley and a mixture of hops. Many stout lovers add a dash of blackcurrant to their drink to cut the heavy flavor.

Other beers that are enjoyed in an Irish pub include Smithwicks, a Kilkenny red ale, and Guinness. These are brewed in Ireland and have a balanced taste of malts, hops, and roasted barley. The stouts and porters are also available bottled in a variety of strength levels. When ordering a beer in an Irish pub, it is common to ask for 'a glass of' rather than a pint.

For those who do not enjoy alcohol, Irish pubs offer a wide variety of non-alcoholic beverages. Zero alcohol beers are popular and are made by both local and international breweries. Guinness 0.0, Heineken Zero, and Rock Shandy are all good choices. Some bars also sell non-alcoholic wines, gins, and whiskeys. Non-alcoholic sodas include Coke, Pepsi, Sprite, and Fanta. Some pubs serve a special soft drink called Red Lemonade which has a cola-esque flavor but is made from ingredients that are a closely guarded secret.

When visiting an Irish pub, you'll want to be sure to bring a warm attitude and an open mind.

The craic, the fun that is experienced in an Irish pub, is unlike anything you'll find anywhere else. You'll meet friendly people and have fascinating conversations about all sorts of topics. It is an incredible experience that should be on your bucket list! If an Irish man buys you a drink, be sure to reciprocate with a toast in Irish -- "Slainte!" (pronounced slawn-chuh).
