Toki Ma sucks, so I'm making my own.

Phonology

	Labial	Coronal	Dorsal
Nasal	m	n
Stop	p	t	k
Fricative		s
Approximant	w	l	j

	Front	Back
Close	i	u
Mid	e	o
Open	a

(C)V(N) syllables, and unlike Toki pona or toki ma, vowel clusters can happen. Nasals cannot cluster, nor can two of the same vowel.
Ti is allowed. Wo is also allowed, but only in loanwords.

Orthography

The orthography is the IPA. You can write it in Sitelen Supa or Hiragana. Why did I let this have its own section?

Grammar

It is mostly the same, except there is a new word, "ki" that marks relative clauses. Also, there is "alu" which works like toki ma "ita". "Sina" and "Ona" are changed to "Si" and "On" and "li" needs to be after "Mi" and "Si". Also, "En" words just like regular "And", appearing between multiple subjects, and between coordinate modifiers in a pi-phrase or other prepositional phrase.

Here are the prepositions

E	(accusative)
Ta	(Dative, Allative)
Tan	(Ablative, Causal)
An	(Locative)

Kepe	(Instrumental)
Kan	(Comitative)
Su	Than, as, like
Pi	(Genitive (Sort of))

“Pi” can be elided in “an ___” constructions. “An sewi pi tomo tawa” can be “An sewi tomo tawa”

Also, for shortcuts for, “Kin la,” “Tan (ni) la,” and “Taso la”, there is “Kina”, “Tana” and “Tasa”

Usually, it is just “Li”, but to differentiate a noun and adjective meaning, use “li lon e” and “li lon”

Also, there is “wa”, which makes a verb causative.

Also, the nouns for “Proper adjectives” can be elided. “jan Misali” can be just “Misali”.

Numbers

There is both a base 5 system, base 6 and a base 10 system

Wan	1
Tu	2
Tuli	3
Po	4
Luki (Base 5)/Papu (Base 6, 10)	5
Kulu	6
Sepen	7
Oto	8
Kajo	9
Ten	10
Eno	25
Nipe	36
Jaku	100
Musu	125
Susu	625

Mili	1000
Nesian	1296
Sueli	3125
Milia	10000

Numbers work like japanese, that is, first comes the 10s digit, then the word for 10, then the one's digit. "42" is "po ten tu". The decimal point is "sala". Ordinals work in TP, adding "nanpa" before it. Also, there is a shortcut for saying "nanpa wan" in the context of "first" which is"open". However, in the context of "most", "nanpa wan" still doesn't get changed.
