That's what we are expecting from copywriter (just to show the idea):

Shure SE215 in-ear earbuds - Best Earbuds for musically

Shure is known for producing some exceptional audio products, and the SE215 earbuds are no exception. These are really designed as professional-grade in ear monitors.

The overall sound quality and durability make these headphones stand out above the rest. And they are a perfect choice for musicians.

PROS
● Great sound quality, balanced sound signature

● One of the best sounding earbuds under $100

CONS
● Not suitable for bassheads

● In-line controls only in upgraded wires

Writing Guidelines

● Be conversational and engaging. Ask questions frequently and be friendly in the post. Try to relate to reader situations and stories.
● Short, concise sentences are preferred. Convey your ideas as simply and clearly as possible. Avoid fluff/filler words for the sake of word count.
● Use everyday vocabulary – this isn't an academic paper.
● Please backup ALL your facts with links to evidence preferably from a site with some kind of authority in the market

- When link out, insert the link on the most relevant words (<like this) in the sentence instead of pasting the entire URL.

DO NOT

1. DON'T include full technical data lists (dimensions, lumens, color temperature etc.). Just mention key points or key features in a review. There will be a separate table with all that data you could refer to.

2. DON'T copy or quote any of the reviews from various sources. You could only rewrite them in your own way.

4. DON'T try to link product features with benefits using a lot of sentences like

- "This product has [feature], which is great because..."
- "Another good feature is [feature], which can help you with..."

5. DON'T try to mention personal stories when linking features and benefits like

- That would have been really useful when <insert story>.
- I really appreciate that feature considering <some personal issue or story>

6. No salesy language.
- Wrong: "You'll find peace of mind when your dog finally stops barking!"
- Wrong: "You can rest easy knowing your dog behavior troubles are finally over."
- Wrong: Anything else that sounds like it could be in an infomercial
- Instead, use conditional language ("If," "might," "could," etc.) if you make recommendations:
  - Correct: "This might be a good choice for those who want an in-home training option."
  - Correct: "If it's important to you to find a positive dog trainer, this might be a good place to start."

7. No filler language
- Please, every sentence should add information.

8. Reference to sources

Refer to at least three sources from "google scholar"
