

A strangely biting sort of cold
Prevails when you are not around
I miss your touch and yet it burns
Your voice though harsh a lovely sound
I cannot bear to part from you
Although your love's naught but a con
I find that love's a horrid beast
And all my sense is surely gone