Groups

Jr Racing is divided into two groups based upon paddler experience, commitment and the appropriate level of training for their age. New Jr Racing members will begin in Group B, and opportunities to move to Group A will be discussed on a case-by-case basis.

Training partners at any given practice are determined by the coach, and may occasionally cross between Groups A and B.

Strength and Conditioning

Strength training is conducted as part of regular practice 3 days a week for Group A. All exercises are supervised and age appropriate. Proper strength training is very safe when conducted correctly, and extremely beneficial to an athlete's progress. If you wish to do other strength training outside of practice, please coordinate with your coach so the training load remains balanced.

Group B does not receive dedicated strength training at all practices. At their typical age and experience level, the bodyweight training done at practice is usually the most age appropriate training for them.

Equipment Required to bring at every practice

You will need:

- Waterproof watch that has a stopwatch. GPS watches are recommended but not required. Our recommendation is the Garmin Forerunner 35 or higher in the forerunner line. Please talk with a coach if considering another option to be sure it has the proper functionality.
- Running Shoes
- Journal - here are some good waterproof ones
- Water bottle - linked is an example of a preferred water bottle. Particularly for in boat use, squeeze bottles are encouraged.
- Snack - this is no joke. Always bring food in your workout bag
- Change of clothes and Towel no matter stability level
- Heart rate Monitor (optional, recommended with GPS watch)
- Cadence Monitor (optional, recommended with GPS watch)

Recommended Clothes

- For Kayakers – Spandex shorts, such as swimming jammers. These allow for better technique
- Gators/Hats
- Sprayskirt - talk to your coach about ordering these

- Neoprene booties - for canoeists in colder temperatures

Clothing Don'ts

- No Cotton – in colder temperatures, we will not allow people wearing cotton on the water due to safety reasons – it does not properly insulate from the cold, and becomes waterlogged when wet
- Neoprene outside of booties for canoeists and pogies for kayakers is not encouraged, as it restricts to much movement

Behavior Expectations

In Jr Racing, athletes have more responsibility. Athlete training schedule in Jr Racing is intense and very hard on the body. Those that recover well will stand out as athletes. You will need to sleep, eat and stretch like you have never done before. Recovery should be treated just as important as training if not more important. You are also expected to be leaders of the team. You have achieved the highest level of training that our team offers to junior paddlers, and the rest of the team looks to you as an example. You are required to be kind to your peers and uplift them and to mentor younger Jr Racing paddlers and Development

Parent Engagement

Parent engagement is much appreciated, and volunteerism when coordinated with the coaching staff is always encouraged. The primary ways to support the team and your athlete are to read and stay up to date on communications, ensure the timely drop-off and pickup of athletes, and helping them achieve their goals by providing proper nutrition, encouraging them to get proper sleep, and transporting them to their races and practices.

Common Questions

What races should my athlete attend?

This varies a bit case by case, and depends greatly on the athletes age, experience, and speed. We recommend Group A athletes attend all local races, as well as Nationals. Group B athletes should attend the same races on a case by case basis depending on the paddlers experience or the level of the race. Many local races include beginner friendly kids courses. International opportunities begin as a Juvie (age 14 at the beginning of the calendar year) but are naturally very competitive. These opportunities are discussed in goal setting sessions, but also feel free to reach out as ask your coaches.

How does my athlete move up?

Jr Racing is the highest level of training we offer to juniors. While the training is scaled appropriately to age and experience, the training design and coaching they are receiving has helped many athletes find success nationally and internationally. Should the athlete show themselves to be capable of maximizing the training load prescribed while maintaining a significant recovery surplus, we will speak with them about how to add additional training load in various ways.
