The high rates of Type 2 diabetes, obesity and heart disease is directly related to the low nutritional food that the government's been feeding us for far too long.

If we can control our food, we can control our future. It's an exciting time to be Indigenous because we can use all of the teachings from our ancestors, and apply them to the modern world.
This is an Indigenous evolution and revolution at the same time.

Growing Strength and Nourishing Sovereignty	Seasonal Rounds

“Fry bread began its life as a cobbled-together food from U.S. government rations, a way to keep from starving when government occupation kept tribal members from pursuing their native foods - elk, buffalo, corn, beans and squash.”

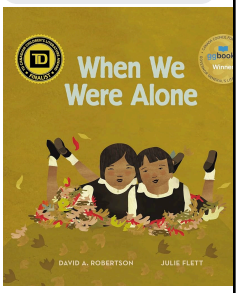

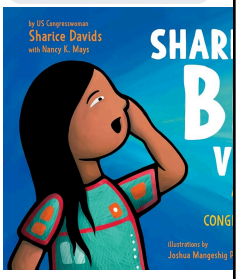

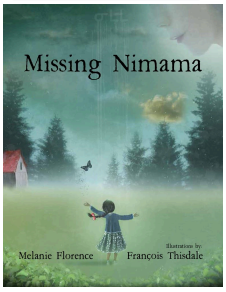

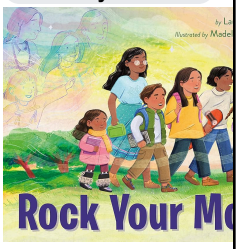

“When the word sovereignty is connected with food, it means “The right to healthy and culturally appropriate food produced through ecologically sound and sustainable methods, and [a Tribe’s] right to define their own food and agriculture systems.” It’s important because many U.S. federal policies impacted the ability of tribes to make decisions for themselves, including their ability to follow their traditional seasonal rounds to harvest food and medicine. Many Tribes were forbidden to follow these rounds and instead were forced to eat food rations provided by the U.S. government. Not only did this make them dependent upon the U.S. government—which they did not want to be—the food was also very low quality and lacked nutritional value. In some cases, the food rations promised to Tribes were taken instead by U.S. soldiers or simply never delivered. Although these food rations—called “commodity boxes”—have improved, many are still low quality and highly processed, and many Indigenous people still rely on them. This has led to severe health problems for many Native people.”

The Yakama - A Realtree Natives Story The Yakama Indians have lived in the Yakima Valley, where they hunt, fish and gather today like their ancestors, since time immemorial. The traditions of Yakama people are a proud and sacred heritage that is passed down from generation to generation. This practice is prevalent in the Wheeler family. Delbert Wheeler Sr., the patriarch of the Wheeler family, was a tough man. He was a golden glove boxer, rodeo rider, entrepreneur and a deadly hunter. His love of the outdoors and surviving on your own in the mountains and the traditions of the Yakama people were passed down to his kids, Kamiakin and Derrick.	• The Deer are Very Precious to Us • Ichishkiin storybook

May 5th is recognized as the National Day of Awareness for Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls/Relatives.

Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women (MMIW) awareness is an ongoing effort to raise awareness about the disproportionate number of Indigenous women and girls/relatives who go missing and are murdered, and to demand justice for their families and communities.

Key Aspects of MMIW Awareness:

National Day of Awareness (May 5th):

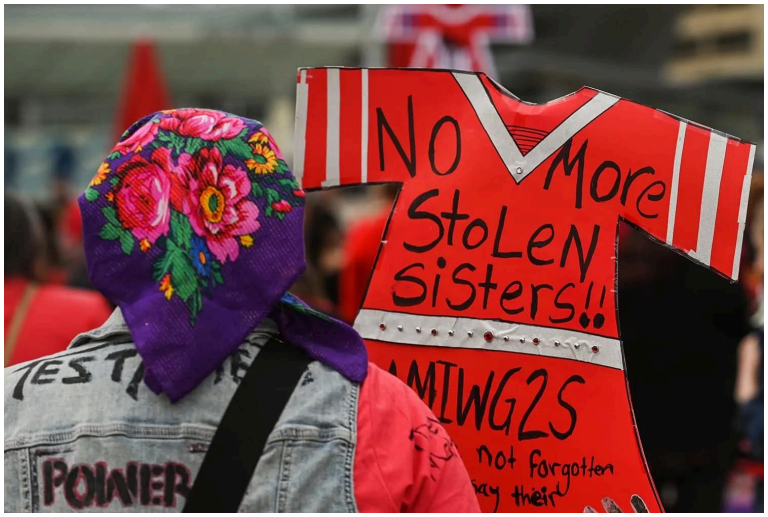

This day is a time for communities and individuals to come together to honor the memory of lost loved ones and to advocate for change.

Red Dress Day:

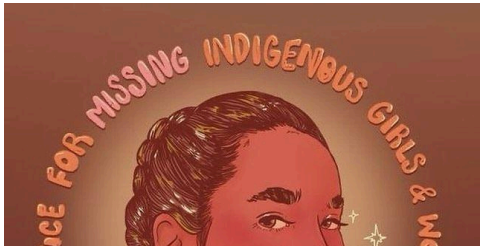

This campaign uses red dresses as a visual symbol to raise awareness about the issue.

Social Media Campaigns:

Hashtags like #MMIW and #NoMoreStolenSisters are used to share information and stories.
