April 26, 2019*

Serving as the genesis for a new artistic direction, DEVAULT's first original release of 2019 dropped last month to much acclaim, paired alongside news of an ambitious new undertaking in progress. "RUNWAY" was self-described as his "most energetic record to date," a first look at his forthcoming JADE project. Comprised of a four track cohesive body of work and a stunning, extended-length, immersive visual, the much-anticipated JADE EP is out now via Geffen / Interscope.

JADE is best experienced via the visual component to the project. The film is meant to be an open-ended visually engaging experience where viewers can follow the characters seamlessly transitioning from scene to scene. We are introduced to the concept of JADE as a type of simulation/program that the characters interact with and are simultaneously a part of. From vandalism to brainwashing to kidnapping, various dark themes intertwine with meticulous detail and aggressive intent. Not to be outdone, the quartet of productions feature a rawness and authenticity that is both awe-inspiring and breathtaking, combining with the visual as the groundwork for what DEVAULT refers to as "a place where the music and visual experience goes hand in hand." It's a potent combination of intoxicating sound design and bold production, an ode to dark 80's new wave that unequivocally is putting his most authentic self on full display to the world.

What started as a creative hobby in the calm scenes of Orange County soon became a personal quest to form something bigger than a unique venture - a modern new wave sound that takes dark rhythms and ethereal-like sound design and clashes them together in perfect sequence. The desire to create music and become an electronic artist has always been a hidden pulse in DEVAULT's life, whether it stemmed from his early obsessions over Depeche Mode's Dave Gahan, or analyzing the blend of fashion, film, and music altogether. It's no longer a search for genre, but rather an evolving sound, appreciating the trials of young adulthood at age 22 and letting him and his audience grow into something beyond a young man and his music. In 2018, DEVAULT was tapped for official remixes with Rihanna, Lorde, and 6lack, amassing millions of plays on all platforms and being a crucial part of Rihanna's "Sex With Me" #1 spot on the Billboard Dance charts. DEVAULT has been most notably known for his remix of DJ Snake's "A Different Way" (DEVAULT Remix), which Billboard labelled as one of the top ten remixes of the 2017 year. DEVAULT went on to release his debut ep STAY later in 2018, which featured NJOMZA, Bipolar Sunshine, Matt Maeson, and Porches.
