Greatest joy in life: Making other people happy, doing seamstress work.
Greatest fear: Being alone.
Greatest strengths: Mental fortitude
Greatest vulnerability or weakness: Her trusting nature doesn't allow her to see when she's getting taken advantage of.
Biggest accomplishment: Getting into a good university
Minor accomplishment:

In Ring

Alignment: Face
Entrance Music: Zecchou BANG!!-Monster ver.- by Girugamesh
Years pro: One.
Athletic Background: Competition Judo prior to wrestling.
Style: POWAH! Tons of suplexes and slams, with a few hard hitting strikes sprinkled in.
Strengths: Mariko puts a lot of training emphasis on her legs, hip flexors and back. As such, if she gets her hands on someone? There's a good chance they're going for an unpleasant ride on the suplex-express. This rings true for even larger opponents, assuming they aren't the size of a Volkswagen Beetle. Furthermore, a background in Judo further augments her knowledge for using power and leverage for her slams, making them that much more effective when she throws them. Lastly, she has exceptionally good ring awareness for someone with her level of experience. She always tends to know where she is at all times, which helps her escape more sticky situations.
Weaknesses: Mariko is GREEN. Despite being trained in the harsh conditions of Joshi dojos, she hasn't escaped certain bad habits. She goes to the well often, repeating successful moves repeatedly or insistently chasing after a move or hold even if it hasn't proven fruitful in the past. Her submission game is middling at best despite her experience as a Judoka due to her focus on the competitive side of the sport. While she can do your most basic moves, she isn't all too comfortable with them and is rarely capable of finishing with them. Worst of all, she wrestles with a certain naivete, never expecting an opponent to do something underhanded, thus leaving her open for all sorts of dirty tactics.
