Abstract. Abstract contains: the research objectives, implementation methods, activity results, and conclusions. It must not exceed 200 words, written in a single paragraph without references, abbreviations/acronyms, or footnotes. The abstract should not be written in a mathematical form, as questions, or suppositions.

Introduction

Introduction should be typed in uppercase [Calisto 12 bold] and should contain the background of addressing a problem, the urgency and rationale of the activity, literature review, problem-solving plan, activity objectives, and hypothesis development [Calisto, 11, normal].

Citations within the article must use reference management software such as Mendeley or similar tools, with a maximum of 15 citations and references. Notes for authors: The article length should be between 3000-5000 words, from introduction to references (including references, notes, and tables). Each article will be checked for plagiarism.

The article should be typed in Microsoft Office Word format using Calisto font size 11, single-spaced, on A4 paper.

The article should be typed in Microsoft Office Word format using Times New Roman font size 11, single-spaced, on A4 paper. The paper format should be 3-3-2-2 (left-top-right-bottom margins).

Authors can submit and register their articles online through the journal's OJS system on the website.

Methods and Strategies

Community Service Method (PKM) explains the implementation method used in the community service activity. The method should be described clearly and in detail, outlining the implementation stages in a clear and detailed manner. Mention the name of the partner and the location of the activity, describe the participants involved, and provide an analysis of the method used to measure the success of the PKM quantitatively, which contains scientific value. Flagship Program

Activities that are flagship programs with benefits for the community and groups. The explanation should be detailed, and if images are needed, they should be included in the article.

Hasil Dan Pembahasan

Explains the results or outputs of the community service, which can include an increase in knowledge, skills, or products. The results should also reflect the level of achievement of the activity's targets. If it involves a product, specifications, advantages, and disadvantages should be explained. The description of the outputs should be accompanied by photos, tables, graphs, diagrams, images, etc. The discussion should follow the order of the objectives and should have been explained previously. The discussion should be accompanied by logical arguments that link the community service results with theories, other community service results, and/or research findings.

Evaluation and Monitoring Stages

After all stages have been completed, the final step is to conduct evaluation and monitoring. This evaluation is necessary to ensure that future activities will improve. In addition, post-training supervision or monitoring is also important. This monitoring is carried out through a coordination system between expert tutors and community service implementers.

Conclusion and Suggestions

Written concisely but reflecting the substance of the community service results and suggestions or recommendations for future community service activities. [Calisto, 11, normal].

References

The reference list must contain at least 15 sources, written using the APA 6th edition (American Psychological Association) style. Use a reference manager (EndNote, Mendeley, Zotero, or similar tools) to facilitate editing and review. The sources referenced should be at least 80% from publications in the last 5 years.
