

Xenogen Protest Event

By: RanmaChan

//Occurs on the square outside the Xenogen Biotech building on Mhen'ga, but only if the PC has completed the first Zil Capture Quest for Dr. Haswell, and has not completed the second, and last, quest. It is supposed to proc mid questline, so that the player can think about how their actions are having an effect on the world.

Walking by the Xenogen Biotech building you notice some sort of commotion. As you get closer you see that a small crowd has formed, made up of a myriad of different races. It is mostly a group of humans, ausar, and kaithrit; but it even contains a few laquines, gryvians, and lethians. They seem to be chanting something, and you can see some of them holding up signs.

As you walk closer you can start to hear what they are chanting:

"Xenogen go home. Leave the Zil alone! Xenogen go home! Leave the Zil alone!"

Walking closer still, you can read the signs now:

'Go home Xenogen!' 'Leave them alone!' 'Stop the exploitation!' 'Zil are people too!'

One sign is just a crude drawing of what you presume to be a Zil and what might be a human holding hands, with hearts randomly drawn all around it.

//If pc.personality = Kind

Hmm, these people feel pretty strongly about this, and what Xenogen is doing. Maybe you ought to rethink your actions?

//If pc.personality = Mischievous

Hey, maybe their protest will work, and maybe it won't, but it doesn't matter. You need to find your dad's probes, and to do that you need credits. Dr. Haswell's are as good as anyone's, right?

//If pc.personality = Hard

The UGC is pretty clear on this sort of thing when it comes to planet rushes, these new species don't have any rights. Xenogen can do what they want with them, and nothing the protesters do will matter, other than slowing down progress; both scientific, and commercial. If these people got their way, nothing would ever get done.
