

Half Beef Details

Bone-In Cuts Preference: As you can see in the example below, choosing bone-in cuts and bones (bone broth anyone?) gives you a better average price per pound. If you were to purchase all of the cuts individually, you would spend at least 10% more money plus your time for each purchase and trip to the farm. In the end, you receive savings. Win! Win!

Boneless Cuts Only Preference: Should you still purchase a half beef if you only want boneless cuts and no bones? This is only something you can answer - the savings will be minimal compared to by-the-piece purchasing. The all-boneless option works well for nose to tail eaters, those who want a single-animal source, and those looking to stock up the freezer. We feel that the peace of mind from knowing you have a freezer full of meat that you can rely on might very well be worth every penny!

In the spreadsheet below, we are going to list everything for a large size half beef with the average cost, average take home weight, and the average price per pound. As you can see, there is a sizable difference in your take home weight depending on if you select bone-in cuts vs. boneless cuts.
