

DCI Speaks

“Telling your story: DCI and Beyond”

DCI Speaks’ mission is to help current and alumni DCIers tell their stories succinctly and powerfully in a variety of ways. The focus is practical. We share best practices, practice delivering our stories in a supportive group setting, and refine our stories based on the constructive feedback we receive.

We invite you to attend a two-workshop series taught by Matt Abrahams, Lecturer of Strategic Communications at Stanford Graduate School of Business.

Who is invited?

All current and DCI alumni are invited - and cohorts are encouraged to attend together.

Why are these workshops important:

A common struggle for DCIers is how to tell their post-DCI story in a compelling manner - where they have been, what they did, and where they are going. Over the course of two workshops, DCI Speaks will help DCIers tell their story succinctly and powerfully.

What is the structure and focus of these workshops?

These workshops are highly practical. Template worksheets will be provided in each to help you write your story. Note: Both workshops are a hybrid format – meaning in person and on Zoom simultaneously – so everyone can attend.

How: Sign up here today or use the sign-up sheet at the DCI Speaks table:

DCI Speaks (Cross Cohort)

WhatsApp group

Co-leaders: Mike Takagawa '21, Huijun Ring '21, Priss Benbow '17

Faculty Advisor: Matt Abrahams, Stanford GSB, Lecturer of Strategic Communications at Stanford Graduate School of Business