

There was a secret meeting on Saturday and they had to be there. They were the bosses of the world's powerful enterprise. One year ago they had the idea that was going to create money, a robot that was going to do all the home tasks. They started selling it but in one week the robots started destroying the houses. The only person that now how stop them was a worker. The bosses called him and they were going to meet at Saturday but when they were going to the park the robots stopped them, were in the street and they were going to kill the bosses and just in the perfect moment the worker save them.