

Ebony Watson is a Deputy Director for the Center for Workforce Development and the National Program Director of the Ready to Achieve Mentoring Program (RAMP). For nearly 20 years, Ebony has provided counsel, assistance, support, and guidance to youth and families involved in the juvenile justice and foster care system. Ebony has worked at IEL to streamline best practices for mentoring youth with disabilities including recruiting and training mentors, mentor-mentee match support, engaging families, case management, and records review. Additionally, Ebony has developed and facilitated trainings that shares the learned strategies and best practices of the RAMP program to assist in the development of peer mentoring programs across the country.

Ebony holds a Master of Social Work degree from Walden University and a Bachelor of Arts degree in Sociology from Augusta State University. Ebony is also a graduate of the Maryland Department of Juvenile Services Leadership Development Institute.